Court Won't Rule

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal dismissed Thursday an application to fine or jail a Powell River newspaper editor who refused to reveal her sources.

The application by the B.C. Ferry Corp. was an attempt to force editor Wendy Fitzgibbons to reveal her sources concerning a story last fall after a ferry crash at Powell River.

Ms. Fitzgibbons wrote that the captain of the vessel was not on the bridge when the ferry hit a dock. The captain was fired following the crash. At a later arbitration hearing, Ms. Fitzgibbons refused to reveal her sources.

The appeal court ruled that it does not have the jurisdiction to consider the request to fine or jail the newspaper editor.

Victoria Rally For PM

Trudeau will fly into Victoria on Friday morning and will address a rally in Centennial Square at 12:15 p.m.

Also present at the rally will be Liberal candidates David Anderson (Cowichan-Malahat) and Robert Monaghan (Victoria) and declared candidate Alan Peterson (Esquimalt - Saanich).

In case of bad weather, the rally will be held in the McPherson Theatre.

Trudeau will leave the rally to fly to Campbell River where he will campaign on behalf of Jack Pearsall, the incumbent Liberal MP for Comox-Powell River. That evening he will return to Vancouver to attend the nominating meeting for the North Vancouver-Burnaby. The only declared candidate for the nomination is Gordon Gibson, former provincial Liberal leader now a top Trudeau aide.

On Saturday (April 7) the prime minister will campaign in the Lower Mainland.

Evacuations Urged by Gov.

Times News Services

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania Governor Dick Thornburgh today advised the evacuation of preschool children and pregnant women from within eight kilometres of the Three Mile Island nuclear plant following a new release of radioactivity from the crippled facility.

He ordered schools in the area closed and urged residents within 16 kilometres of the establishment to stay indoors.

The governor had at first said he was considering ordering an evacuation, but decided against the move after discussing the matter with officials of the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

The governor's statement said there was "a series of uncontrolled bursts of radiation from about 6:40 a.m. until about 9 a.m. this morning."

However, Frank Ingram, an NRC official, said in Washington that the release was not unexpected and occurred as an automatic part of the recirculation of reactor cooling water.

Ingram said NRC staff members in Pennsylvania, in touch with the power plant operators, reported that the plant had again begun using its primary cooling system, which had been largely out of operation since the initial accident Wednesday.

As this cooling water circulates, it passes through a system which removes radioactivity and during normal operation small amounts of radioactivity are routinely released to the atmosphere.

When the primary system was restarted, this process took place, but the radioactivity released to the atmosphere was, at first, higher than normal, Ingram said.

He said radioactive releases were continuing, through this cooling process, but were decreasing "to somewhere near the normal range".

Ingram said the amounts of radioactivity released by the start-up of the primary system were not known exactly but appeared to be small.

Police Pick Up Pieces

It was like a demolition derby on Victoria streets overnight.

Traffic officers had their busiest night in months picking up the pieces after nine accidents.

A spokesman said damage will run into the thousands of dollars but only one person was injured badly enough to stay in hospital.

William David Williams, 16, of 1701 Ryan, was admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital with a broken left arm following a two-vehicle collision at Bay and Douglas at 11:55 p.m.

The youth's car went out of control after the collision, bounced off a signal standard and slammed into a power pole. Firemen had to use their Jaws of Life machine to remove him from the wreckage. The other car took off.

Police were chasing the car — reported stolen only seconds before — when the driver lost control coming off the bridge.

The car skidded on to a boulevard, struck a pole and flipped over in the air three times before coming to rest on the pavement.

The driver jumped out and started to flee but was caught a short distance away by officers.

He was to appear in provincial court charged with impaired driving and car theft.

The car, which was a write-off, is owned by Laure Alice Ayer, 29, of 1136 Fairfield.

Police said she had parked the car in the 1500-block Government, and leaving the keys in the ignition, hurried into a nearby building.

IRA Bomb Kills British MP

LONDON (CP) — Airey Neave, a top Conservative party official and the party's spokesman on Northern Ireland affairs, was assassinated today when a bomb exploded just outside the 700-year-old House of Commons. The militant Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) claimed responsibility.

Police said the bomb went off as the car, described as a blue Vauxhall and believed to have been driven by Neave, was at an entrance ramp leading to the underground parking garage at the sprawling Palace of Westminster, the seat of Parliament on the River Thames.

A Scotland Yard official said the blast was caused by a half-pound explosive device placed in the front of the car.

In Belfast, IRA sources told reporters that their Belfast Brigade had sent a special group of bombers to London to carry out the killing.

Police on the scene said they believed the person who planted the bomb escaped on a motor scooter. A city-wide alert was issued for the man, however, a description of the suspect was not disclosed.

Arthur Bottomley, another member of Parliament, was driving in a car just behind Neave's and saw the blast.

"At first I thought the explosion was in my car," he said. "Dust and glass was flying everywhere."

Conservative leader Margaret Thatcher cancelled a nationwide television broadcast tonight which was to have launched her election campaign. She did so, she said, as a tribute to "an old and very dear friend."

Police said the 63-year-old Neave, Conservative MP for Abingdon in Berkshire west of London, was trapped inside the vehicle for some time. London Ambulance Service later said he was dead on arrival at nearby Westminster Hospital.

Several MPs were in the House of Commons chamber debating a bill in the final days of this Parliament when the blast occurred at about 3 p.m. London time.

Some MPS and journalists rushed from the neo-Gothic building into the adjacent Palace Yard upon hearing the explosion. But police formed a cordon and kept them back because of the

Amin's Army Shrinks, Residents Flee City

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — President Idi Amin's shrinking army of loyal troops held on to Kampala today as Tanzanian invaders and Ugandan exiles pushed to within 13 kilometres of the capital. Thousands of frightened residents streamed from the city.

"All we are sure of is that, for now, Kampala is still in the hands of the Ugandan government and army," said a diplomat there who was reached by telephone from Nairobi.

And in Tanzania, the government said a Soviet-built Libyan bomber attacked the northern Tanzanian town of Mwanza on Thursday, dropping five bombs in and around the town on the shores of Lake Victoria, injuring one person. The Libyans are helping Amin fight an invasion force of Ugandan exiles and Tanzanian troops.

In Kampala, there was no confirmation of claims by Ugandan exiles that Amin had fled with loyal Nubian troops toward his hometown of Arua, possibly to make a last stand in that remote corner of northwestern Uganda.

One resident of Kampala said gunshots echoed through the streets as "drunken Ugandan deserters wandered around firing in the air."

No fighting was reported within the hilly city of 400,000, and residents said heavy rains cut short the invaders' shelling Thursday night. They said two children were killed by a shell that fell in the backyard of a house in western Kampala but no other casualties were reported.

They reported Ugandan tanks drove through the city Thursday afternoon heading toward Natete, a road junction 10 kilometres to the southwest. They returned after dark following a noisy battle that lasted several hours, the informants said. The outcome of the fighting was not known.

Long lines of refugees, many carrying babies and meager bundles, fled Kampala on foot. Scores of foreigners, including diplomats and their families and UN employees, drove east to Kenya.

Meet The Stars

Ellen Burstyn has made an impact on Hollywood as a tough but funny actress. After a fairly ordinary career she achieved stardom and won an Academy award in 1975 for her role as an abandoned wife and mother in Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore.

Born Edna Gilhooley in 1932, she started her motion picture career in 1964 in the sardonic comedy Goodbye Charlie. She also appeared in The Last Picture Show and The Exorcist.

Readers have a chance to win a trip for two to Hollywood if they enter the annual Times-VI90 Visit the Stars contest and correctly predict the Oscar winners for best actress, best actor and best picture as chosen April 9.

Food Man Tells of $8,500 Pay-Off

TORONTO (CP) — Discounts and allowances paid by food suppliers to large supermarket chains have soared in the last five years and McCain Foods Ltd. products have been pulled off store shelves and a large order cancelled because the company refused to pay more "inside money" to a supermarket.

Jack Morgan of J.P. Morgan Ltd. told an Ontario royal commission that he paid chains up to $8,500 five years ago for a full-scale promotion of his products, which included advertising and in-store promotion.

Executives in the food business say the cost now is as high as $30,000, Morgan told the royal commission on discounts and allowances in the food industry.

Vice-president of marketing for McCain, Archie McLean, said his firm spends about half its advertising and marketing budget on what he calls inside money — amounts paid to supermarkets for co-operative advertising, listing allowances or to encourage a larger purchase of a product.

He declined, however, to elaborate when questioned by a lawyer for the Ontario Federation of Agriculture.

Commissioner Wilfred Leach told the lawyer, James Murray, that it was unfair to press McLean if he did not want not to be more specific.

Morgan said listing fees or charges, levied by the supermarkets in return for carrying a new product, began with a $50 charge to cover the cost of listing a new product in a chain's computer.

Separate testimony to the commission this week has indicated that Dominion Stores Ltd. received $5,000 last year and Loblaws Ltd. $2,000 for listing and promoting Lyle's Syrup, a new sugar cane syrup sold in Canada through Redpath Sugars Ltd.

Morgan said listing allowances, or discounts off the usual price for a new product, can cost a supplier substantial amounts of money.

He said he once negotiated the sale of Dutch Melba Toast with an Ontario chain store, giving the store a five-per-cent discount as a listing allowance and an additional five per cent for delivering in carload lots.

Expecting a larger order, Morgan said he also agreed to give the chain one free case of Melba Toast for each store.

When the chain ordered only one case a store, effectively netting itself a 50-per-cent discount out of the free cases alone. "I took a bath, all right."

Morgan said discounts and allowances are accepted in the food industry as normal cost.

"They're viewed with some suspicion (by the general public) because people don't know about them or understand them," Morgan said.

He said he would prefer to

Jimmy Got His Radiation

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has the dubious distinction of being the first country to have a nuclear reactor accident — one witnessed by the current president of the United States.

The mishap, witnessed by a young United States naval officer named Jimmy Carter, occured Dec. 12, 1952, when a combination of human error and technical faults sent power surging through the government's NRX research reactor at Chalk River, Ont., about 200 kilometres northwest of Ottawa.

A White House spokesman said the future president received one year's permissible dosage of radiation in about two minutes when he descended into the the hellishly-hot reactor core to help disassemble it.

For more than a year Carter and another man who helped dismantle the melted reactor parts had to save their feces and urine for radiation tests.

Carter had been detached from his post as senior officer of the United States submarine Sea Wolf to examine American and Canadian nuclear facilities.

The power over-load melted some fuel rods and released a large cloud of radioactivity from the container into the atmosphere before heavy-water coolant was dumped in to cool things off. The accident took months to clean up.

Federal Deficit Up Again

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal spending deficit rose to $10.9 billion in the first 11 months of the fiscal years, up from $7.85 billion in the same period a year earlier, Finance Minister Jean Chretien reported Thursday.

Chretien said in a release that spending to the end of February totalled $41.1 billion, up from $36.8 billion a year earlier.

Total revenues to the end of February were $30.2 billion, up from $28.9 billion a year ago.

$40,000 Prize For Humane Trap

A $40,000 prize fund has been established by the provincial government for inventors who develop humane traps to replace the leg-hold trap for a species of animals or a group of species.

The fund, earmarked from provincial lottery earnings, will be allocated through the environment ministry which is responsible for the fur industry.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said an additional $60,000 has been set aside for research awards to investigate, evaluate and assess improved trapping devices.

Management of the fund and awards will be under the jurisdiction of a Committee for Humane Trapping to be established by the ministry.

Review and testing of any device recommended for prizes will be carried out in consultation with the scientific and technical subcommittee of the federal-provincial humane trapping committee.

N-Plant Spews New Peril

E. C. McCabe, section chief with the NRC, said a 30 millirem per hour reading was taken south of the plant after the release and was rapidly decreasing.

That was "not an indication of a serious problem," he said. "It is indicative of a gaseous pocket that was released and dissipated."

Speaking fom the plant site, McCabe added: "We have not heard of anything serious enough for an evacuation yet. If it were 10 times that, I would start thinking of limiting the stay time for people working in the plant."

Stocks of companies in the nuclear-power industries, meanwhile, declined broadly on Wall Street today as investors watched the situation at Harrisburg.

According to analysts, word of the release of more radiation from the plant touched off selling in several stocks.

The company recently released a film, The China Syndrome, about a fictional accident at a nuclear facility.

Analysts said investors apparently were buying the stock on the belief that the Harrisburg incident, and publicity resulting from it, would intensify interest in the movie.

Earlier, officials had said a controlled release of low-level radiation was still beaming from 250,000 gallons of highly radioactive water inside the plant, and experts said the water might have to be buried in lead or evaporated.

But at that time federal authorities said the radiation was contained inside the Three Mile Island nuclear plant's 280-acre perimeter and no longer was a threat to neighbors of the power plant.

"Based on what we've been able to see so far, the danger is over for the people off site," said Charles Gallina, a Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) investigator who went to the scene after the reactor's cooling system malfunctioned early Wednesday.

Plant engineers considered the two most likely ways to clean up the nuclear-charged water, sealed inside the reactor dome and ankle-deep inside another building where water is normally cooled.

One method to deal with the problem would be to solidify the waste material with cement, formaldehyde or more complex chemicals and bury it in lead-lined canisters.

Another would involve evaporating radioactive gases from the water and storing the gases in holding tanks at the plant. The gases would lose radioactivity in two months and could safely be released into the air, said Richard Klingaman, chief of generation engineering.

The cleansed water would then be flushed into the Susquehanna River.

CN Rail Picketed

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 1,000 Canadian National Railways workers were off the job today after members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers set up 24-hour information pickets here and in Kamloops.

The union members were protesting a three-year contract between the national union and CP Rail and CN.

They say they want a one-year contract and that the tentative agreement does not provide for regional interests.

Another Major Storm Sweeps across Britain

LONDON (AP) — Heavy rain, sleet and snow swept across northeast England on Thursday, leaving some areas under 1.2 metres of water and blocking major highways.

The deluge dumped nearly an average month's rainfall on the city of Newcastle in 24 hours, said the local weather centre, which measured four centimetres of rain by 9 a.m. Thursday.

Thirty people were evacuated in Lanchester, Durham County, from a flooded home for the elderly and were given refuge in a local hospital.

The main street in the town of Chester-le-Street was under 1.2 metres of water. "It's the worst weather I have ever known," said Peter Trietline, a health official there.

Police said snow plows were called out to clear major roads in the higher elevations, and rescue teams launched dinghies to evacuate families from flooded low-lying districts.

A flood alert was posted at the fishing port of North Shields, where the quay was under 1.2 metres of water Thursday morning.

Britain has had its the worst winter weather in 16 years, and weathermen said there was still no sign of spring.

Forgotten Pardon Deserves Apology

CAGNEY

BROWN

. . . White House next?

David Miles, of Lapawi, Idaho, always maintained that he was not guilty of a manslaughter conviction that sent him to jail for nine months. Idaho's governor apparently agreed and granted him a pardon, but nobody told Miles until this year — 40 years after the pardon was issued. Pardon proceedings on Miles' behalf were initiated earlier this year. But a clerk digging through old records discovered that on April 14, 1939 — only five days after Miles finished his jail term — he was given a full pardon by then-Gov. C. A. Bottolfsen, now dead.

Actor Jimmy Cagney, 79, is being treated for sciatica at Hollywood's Good Samaritan Hospital, a family spokesman says. "There's nothing seriously wrong, but it is painful," the spokesman said Thursday.

Also on the Hollywood sick list is the son of actor Chuck Connors, reported in stable condition today following 3½ hours of surgery for a gunshot wound to the stomach, suffered when he tried to stop a car theft. Police said that after Jeff Connors, 27, was shot Thursday, two of his co-workers at a car dealership and an armed security guard who worked next door captured a young man who was booked for investigation of robbery and attempted murder.

A painting bought by a Toronto woman, now in her 80s, in her youth on a Parisian vacation was auctioned off for $25,000 Thursday. The small painting, Souvenir des Marais de Sin, by 19th Century French landscape painter Jean-Baptiste Camille Corot, discovered in the woman's hall closet last summer as she was being moved from her house to a nursing home, was snapped up by New York art dealers Ira Spanierman and Herbert Roman.

California Gov. Jerry Brown still is playing it coy where a bid for the White House is concerned, but he told Johnny Carson Thursday night in Los Angeles he's "getting close" to a decision. Asked why anyone would seek the stress of the presidency, Brown said, "I believe the job seeks the man. Whether it's pleasant or uncomfortable is not the point. Sometimes you know inside ..."

In the 1960s, Walter Carlos created Switched-On Bach — the decade's largest-selling classical music album. Later he did the score for the film Clockwork Orange. But Carlos' latest creation is himself — or rather, herself. It's not Walter Carlos any more — it's Wendy Carlos, and she tells the whole tale of her hitherto secret sex change in the April 3 issue of Playboy magazine. She says from earliest youth, she felt "female," and couldn't understand why her parents didn't understand. Now, she says, she's been transformed from an unhappy, suicidal man to a happy woman — that "all I have really done is change my suit of skin and bone." Her parents still don't understand. They still call her "Walter."

A minister in Leavenworth, Wash., wants to exorcise a high school literature class dealing in part with witchcraft and sorcery. The class — Horror and the Occult — was started in 1973, and is attended by high school juniors and seniors. "I view this (study) as highly unwise and extremely dangerous for the young people involved," Rev. James West, pastor of the Nazarene Church, wrote the Leavenworth school board. "This is not an academic study suitable for unlettered and adolescent children who are not able to discern spiritual truth. Satanic influences are present in the world and the 'mere study' of these is extremely dangerous. The potential damage that the nature of these books can do in our children is terrible."

Liberal Victory Hint Of Poll?

Times News Services

Britain's third party, the middle-road Liberals, scored a resounding victory Thursday in a byelection for a working class north-of-England district that had gone heavily Labor in 1974.

City councillor David Alton, 28, relegated Labor to second place and kept the opposition Conservatives in third.

Political insiders say the result could provide an indication of what might be expected in the coming national election.

Meanwhile Prime Minister Jim Callaghan opened his re-election campaign Thursday, warning Britons they risk "tearing everything up by the roots" if they elect a Conservative government May 3.

Callaghan also said that Tory leader Margaret Thatcher's right-wing policies would bring fresh battles with powerful British trade unions and cause new upheaval.

Mrs. Thatcher launched the Conservative campaign with the statement: "My troops are ready."

In a related development, thirteen days of noisy political meetings in drafty halls and train journeys from 5 a.m. to midnight may not be most people's idea of an ideal vacation tour. But 60 Britons are going to pay £600 ($1,400) to do just that.

They have signed up with Keith Prowse Travel Ltd. to follow Britain's big political guns around the country, starting April 21, as they campaign for the general election.

Saudis Refuse to Back Hard Line Against Egypt

Times News Services

BAGHDAD — The Arab conference to punish President Anwar Sadat for signing a peace treaty with Israel appeared headed for a break-up in disarray today as Saudi Arabia and other conservatives refused to vote harsh sanctions.

Foreign Minister Sadoun Hammadi of Iraq, which seeks a total political and economic boycott of Egypt, said if no agreement was reached today "we will split and each country will act as it wishes."

Hammadi, the foreign and finance ministers of 14 other Arab League countries and representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization met briefly Thursday, then recessed for 24 hours to consult with their governments on what to do next.

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, another conservative, are the only Arab countries whose position is of crucial importance to Egypt since they are the only ones that make vital contributions to the Egyptian economy.

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait loaned Egypt just less than $1 billion last year and supplied unknown amounts of military aid, and Saudi Arabia promised to pay for $500 million worth of U.S. F-5 jet fighters for Egypt. Saudi Arabia and Kuwait also bank about $2 billion in petrodollars in Cairo.

An Arab trade boycott would be more of an annoyance than a crippling blow since only about three per cent of Egypt's exports went to its Arab neighbors last year and less than 12 per cent of its imports came from the Middle East. The most serious effect probably will be the loss of 10,000 tons of Syrian lentils a year, a staple in the diet of poor Egyptians.

Meanwhile, one Palestinian official says Arab guerrillas will now strike at American targets because his people have "nothing left to lose" since Arab leaders refuse to impose tough sanctions against Washington and Cairo.

But as Palestinians threatened violence, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin announced the first tangible sign of peace, a civilian highway between Israel and Egypt that Begin said will open within days.

Egypt's President Anawar Sadat, in West Germany today for rest and talks on economic aid, ordered his country's embassy in Jordan shut down and dismissed as a failure the Baghdad meeting considering measures against Cairo and Washington.

"From today, we will not hesitate to take any action against America and U.S. interests. There is nothing left to lose," Farouk Kaddoumi, head of the political department of the Palestine Liberation Organization, said Thursday.

Sadat, in dismissing the Baghdad meeting, said in remarks published by state-controlled newspapers: "Nobody can isolate Egypt. How can they isolate the largest Arab country? How can they isolate 40 million people? This is nothing but cheap emotionalism."

A Cairo military spokesman, meanwhile, denied reports that the Egyptian armed forces were on standby alert and described as "routine" Egyptian military activities along the western border with Libya.

What does Fryer want?

There are few areas of concern where John Fryer, secretary of the B.C. Government Employees Union, has feared to tread. An ambitious, talented organizer who has done a good job in helping to forge a strong union, Fryer is obviously eager to make an impact outside his own organization. With swelling union reserves of several million dollars and a reputation as a power in the B.C. labor movement, Fryer and the BCGEU have the wherewithal to do so.

Under his leadership, the BCGEU has become an important kingpin in the B.C. Federation of Labor, rivalled in influence at labor's central organization probably only by the big forest union, the International Woodworkers of America. And under Fryer's leadership, the BCGEU helped weld together a national coalition of public and government employee unions.

He is not content to endure complaints meekly. Writers of letters to the editor critical of some BCGEU policy or its leadership are promptly rebutted in print over the signature of the union secretary. At Fryer's urging, the union recently spent $100,000 telling Victoria residents that its members are sincere, dedicated and hard-working.

Fryer has clearly demonstrated he has plans for the BCGEU and himself that go beyond the bread and butter concerns of most of the 43,000 civil servants which he represents. He is trying to bring these typically most timid of trade unionists around to a stance of social and political activism.

But by taking an active, public role in the month-old strike at Simon Fraser University, he has created some doubts in the public mind about just what his goals are and how far he is willing to go to achieve them.

He appeared at a picket line manned by members of the Association of University and College Employees and in an angry speech counselled them to block the roads up Burnaby Mountain into SFU.

"As far as I'm concerned, every single person that drives up that hill is a scab and is against you and you should do something about it. Why aren't those roads blocked? And don't tell me it's illegal," he was quoted.

He led people out into the middle of Gaglardi Way and the crowd barred traffic for several hours. Only after RCMP arrested 18 people was the highway reopened. Fryer didn't hang around for the police action, however. He left shortly after the pickets blocked the road.

Labor Minister Allan Williams suggested Fryer showed "extremely bad judgement" and even New Democratic Party leader Dave Barrett, whose party has lately kissed and made up with labor, called Fryer's actions foolish. Fryer calls this self-righteous clap-trap."

Fryer and the BCGEU have every right to offer fraternal support to another union struggling to negotiate a contract, but they have no right to shut down a public highway and or to deny access to several thousand students and other staff — some of them in other unions — who work and study at SFU.

Fryer's meddling does not inspire much confidence in the union's much advertised claims of "skill, experience and dedication" and its members' sober and responsible attitude towards their jobs.

Learning by example

With depressing regularity educators report that many B.C. high school graduates cannot write clearly and effectively. A wide variety of reasons and excuses has been offered for this sad state of affairs.

Perhaps one reason, often overlooked, is that the students are following the timeworn educational precept of learning by example.

At a recent meeting of the Greater Vitoria school board's planning committee, for instance, trustees debated the following motion:

"That the Greater Victoria school board set out specific policy for capital project requests to the ministry of education to include:

1. District planning to rationalize all requests

2. Specific contemporary school boundaries relating to the efficacy of requests

3. Tendering the components related to architectural and professional appraisals relating to requests

4. Specificity of contents of requests relating to: (a) which of the facets of the request are truly capital; (b) and which are maintenance

5. Specific guidelines to administration requiring board approval for (a) all requests over and above all initially approved capital requests; (b) all requests for utilization of funds surplus of ministry approval due to low tenders

6. Legal requirements to predicate request by (a) public disclosure and meeting with appropriate tendered costs of appraisal; (b) referendum to public at the election date preceding the year of capital request."

The school board motion stands as a sterling model for any high school class studying ways not to write clearly.

Woman follows the leader

WASHINGTON — Anthropologist Mary Leakey has announced to the world the discovery in Tanzania of two sets of human-like footprints that date back 3.6 million years.

In Washington, meanwhile, Illinois housewife and activist Phyllis Schlafly was organizing a gala wake for the Equal Rights Amendment, which she declared "legally, morally and constitutionally dead" after seven years.

The two events, both important in their own way, were not entirely unlinked. It came as something of a surprise that Mrs. Schlafly, who rarely misses a chance to point out the traditional differences between men and women, didn't make the connection.

It seems, according to Mrs. Leakey's research, that the footprints found on a volcanic bed in East Africa were those of a man and a woman. The man, whose feet were larger, walked ahead and generally in a straight line.

Slow down, Ralph

The woman followed. But her smaller footprints were more deeply set. This suggests that she was carrying a child, or perhaps even a load of furs or a haunch from a freshly-killed antelope.

At one point, her tracks show, she made a half-turn to the left, as if something had caught her attention and she looked back. The man, however, purposefully continued walking straight ahead. One can almost imagine a snatch of primitive conversation: "Ralph, slow down for heaven's sake."

Mrs. Schlafly has fought, and apparently defeated the ERA with her argument that women, the weaker sex, should not be required to walk in step with men in their endeavors. This is part of the social contract, she says. It's curious she overlooked the stone age precedent.

According to Paul Erdman's "prophetic" best-selling novel, The Crash of 79, March 22 was to be the day the American economy collapsed and half the world's oil supply was destroyed in a nuclear war. Since its publication three years ago, the book has provided thrilling cocktail party chatter for its remarkably realistic scenario.

The book portrays an increasingly aggressive Iran which seeks to get a lock on the Middle East oil supply and a simultaneous run on American banks as the national debt mushrooms.

Even when the novel's villain, Shah Reza Pahlavi, was deposed in real-life earlier this year, Erdman's "prophecies" seemed to lose little validity among his devotees.

But March 22 came and went, and nothing really happened. Erdman told a Cincinnati bankers' club recently that his novel wasn't really meant as a prophecy. "I'm merely saying that we are vulnerable. Twenty years ago such a thing was unthinkable. Today it is thinkable."

J. Gordon Melton, a Methodist minister, has just completed a monumental work: a 1,200-page encyclopedia of American religious groups, cults and sects that took him 16 years to research and write.

The encyclopedia contains a fascinating chapter on the country's "hidden religions" — the underside of U.S. worship and fanaticism which spawned the likes of Rev. Jim Jones People Temple.

Among the more bizarre entries in the encyclopedia are:

☐ The Neo-American church, a California-based sect founded by one Arthur Kleps (known as Chief Boo Hoo) which has as its symbol a smiling three-eyed toad. The church believes that man can transcend his innate corruption only through massive doses of psychedelic drugs. Kleps edits a church periodical, entitled Divine Toad Sweat.

A notorious lecher

☐ The Lorain Association, founded by a Scottish couple and transplanted to California, which believes that common garden plants (nourished by the love of community members) give off divine messages.

☐ Robin's Return, founded by a Michigan couple whose son Robin was shot down and killed in Vietnam in 1965. The couple claims to receive regular messages from their deceased son and a variety of Hindu masters, and these messages are circulated among members throughout the country.

☐ The Ordo Templi Orientis, a ritual magic sect with chapters in several U.S. cities. The Ordo is heavily influenced by the writings of an Englishman named Aleister Crowley, a notorious lecher and reputed murderer who claimed to be in communion with the "astral." He died in 1947.

Dental protest

The College of Dental Surgeons of B.C. has initiated a dental plan for certain residents of B.C. This dental plan is to be, in part or in whole, paid for, regulated and controlled by the government of B.C.

You may not agree with the principles that are the basis of such a plan. The declaration that follows is meant to provide you with a vehicle for protest if, in your opinion, you consider it right to do so.

To make effective use of this protest, sign it with your own name and mail it to Premier Bennett. No postage is required.

To The Honorable Premier William Bennett:

Whereas: Men, by nature, have a right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness;

Whereas: These rights imply the right of ownership, production and free trade;

Whereas: Doctors and dentists are men and have these same rights;

Whereas: It is the responsibility of governments to protect individual liberty and no government or person has the right to use force against another, except in defence of said individual liberty;

Whereas: State health care is health care by force of law, obtaining the involuntary servitude of doctors and dentists by force;

Whereas: Involuntary servitude is the essence of slavery.

Therefore: I, the undersigned, protest against a dental plan regulated, sponsored and paid for, in part or in whole, by the government of B.C., or any other government. — Adrian van Hoek, 2-372 Coronation Avenue, Duncan.

On homework

I am appalled at Susan Brice's suggestion to make homework compulsory. I am a 13-year-old student at James Bay School. It is the teacher's decision. And no one else should meddle in it. Carol Pickup is right in her opposition to this garbage.

It seems to me that Ms. Pickup has taken a lot from Susan Brice. But I would have to praise Ms. Pickup's cool manner. That is something we should see from other politicians. — Darryl Harand, 2-101 St. Lawrence.

Laughing stock

If it wasn't for the sorry state of our natural resources which are speedily dwindling, one could get a real belly laugh watching the footwork of our leaders around the sizzling issue of the loggers' arrests in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Seldom are we treated to the spectacle of two archenemies dancing in a close embrace.

The union leader wears blinkers which don't let him see anything beyond a few jobs for his members. The government leader supports the union president out of desperation for a few labor votes in the upcoming election.

In the next decade, with the forests gone and the loggers looking for other jobs, it would be nice to still have salmon around to fall back on.

Meanwhile, both gentlemen, their trumpets blaring, flout the law of the country. Worse yet, they obscure the vital issue of food source preservation by reducing it to the trivial level of an ordinary spat between the federal and provincial bureaucrats. — John Willow, 1644 Rockland Avenue.

Loggers don't care

From 1936 to 1938 in my employment as a salmon buyer I heard complaints from commercial fishermen about logging methods and the disregard shown by logging operators for the salmon spawning rivers and streams.

Since that time I have read many articles about the declining salmon catches in B.C. waters. Now the federal government is spending millions of dollars establishing fish hatcheries. Money that is generally conceded need not have been spent if historically we had all observed more discriminate methods of logging, damming and safeguarding water from outfall from industrial operations.

My support is for the federal fisheries department in its present confrontation in the Queen Charlotte Islands. I hope that all who depend on fishing for their living and all sports fishermen will stand up and be counted.

We all realize that logging is the main portion of the province's economy, and that logging must and will go on and on. However, my personal beef is why nothing is done to stop the complete and utter devastation that results when an area is logged. We can all recall good spawning rivers and streams which have long since dropped to useless levels and are filled with silt. Why must this devastation be carried to the very edge of the water? Would God get us if we stipulated that a green belt be left there?

Those industries that disrupt and pollute our rivers and streams must give serious thought to the future resources and consider other interests beside their own. — W.A. Coultan, 1310 Craigflower Road.

Wasting money

Your editorial correspondence of March 23 (Harebrained and A bargain) has offered to your readers two outstanding letters, both pointing out the foolish use of taxpayers' hard-earned and, may I add, very hard-saved money.

No citizen would object to the payment of income tax which goes to provide services such as police protection, fire, safety, ambulances and hospitals as first priority.

But when we see the wasteful squandering on unnecessary or frivolous programs, such as the ones criticized in the two letters, we have the right to express our indignation and tell politicians to stop.

We have seen, close home right in Victoria, and farther east in Ottawa, a total disregard of taxpayers' money. It doesn't seem that there is a way out, as our protests will fall on deaf ears. Perhaps, at least at the local level, task forces, requested studies, extra cash for some so-called worthwhile projects (watch out for bleeding hearts, very generous with somebody else's money) should be submitted as initiatives to the voters who pay provincial and federal taxes (not those who fill a form just for a refund) and the initiative should receive at least 60 per cent yes votes. The purpose, the duration, the cost of the project should be stated in clear terms, so that the paying public will not be deceived.

This, of course, will require the participation of the voting taxpayers for, if they remain apathetic, indifferent, lazy and unconcerned, governments at all levels will go on their merry-go-round ripping off the people.

Maybe we should examine closely the Proposition 13 of California. — E.J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

Project North

Last week's standing-room-only crowd that attended the public event in St. John's Church as part of a Canada-wide northern native rights campaign was a clear indication of the interest and concern that many Victorians have in the future of the native people of Canada. Similar events in Chemainus, Courtenay, Port Alberni, Parksville and Ganges, as well as all across Canada, have far exceeded any expectations. This kind of response by people in the south indicates that growing numbers of Canadians do indeed care and want to see the native people given their right to control their own destinies and retain their aboriginal rights.

Because of the huge crowd at Victoria's public meeting last week it was physically impossible to divide into smaller groups to plan future action. Watch for a workshop kind of meeting slated for the near future when plans will be made for events around forthcoming federal and provincial elections, the constitutional debate, and Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline, as well as a continuing program to foster public awareness of the aspirations of native people of Canada.

Our sincere thanks to the hundreds of people who turned out to listen at the many events which took place last week, and especially to all those who helped in the planning and execution of them. — Mavis M. Gillie, Chairman, Project North (Victoria).

Still under study

It is unfortunate that Eugene Kaellis felt it necessary to resort to the columns of your newspaper in expressing his position with respect to the hospital ombudsman.

When the resolution to establish the position of ombudsman came before the February board meeting, it was fully discussed and after considerable discussion (mostly relating to the establishment of a full-time position at an estimated salary of $25,000 per year) the resolution came to the vote. The vote was tied and as a matter of parliamentary procedure the resolution was consequently declared defeated.

Prior to the board meeting the question of the ombudsman had not been referred to any committees of the board other than the personnel committee, which attempted to draft terms of reference. Now the matter of the ombudsman has been referred to the Hospital Quality Assurance Committee. Eugene Kaellis was at a meeting of that committee on March 5 at which the matter was fully canvassed, not only by members of the committee but also by any other member of the board who wished to attend.

Kaellis' allegation that the board has ignored explicit instructions from the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society could not, in this instance, be further from the truth. Consistent with the principles of representative government, the board is responsible for the day-to-day functioning of the hospital and since the society's resolution regarding the ombudsman, has been examining the ways and means necessary for the implementation of this position.

It is most unfortunate that Kaellis moved the resolution at the board level before the matter had been discussed at all of the appropriate committees.

Before Kaellis attempts to create an issue where none exists he should await the report from the Quality Assurance Committee and the further deliberations of the board. His current assertions in the press are both premature and without foundation. — Alan N. Patterson, Chairman, Board of Management, Victoria General Hospital.

Minority gov't and the NDP dilemma

By DOUGLAS FISHER

BROADBENT . . . who does he back?

OTTAWA — "Indeed, the most important politician in Canada today is — guess who? — the modest, unassuming Ed Broadbent." Dalton Camp, March, 1979.

The Broadbent spectre rather exasperates Mr. Camp. What he sees has been sketched here before. If the Liberals do not pick up eight or more points (in the Gallup) by election day, or if the Tories do not pick up four or five by then, no party will have the needed 142 seats for a majority.

Unless the current NDP percentage, hanging between 17 per cent and 19 per cent, drops away to 12 per cent or 13 per cent by election day, the party is likely to have at least 15 seats, perhaps as many as 25 seats.

Or, getting to the point, a minority government looks very likely. And Mr. Camp, like many other Tories, and even more Liberals, sees Broadbent and his caucus band as the "sustainers" or the "makers" of a prime minister through the first, crucial "want of confidence" motions in the next Parliament. Who will, who would, who should Mr. Broadbent support? Trudeau or Clark? Liberal incumbents or fresh Conservatives?

If Clark has more seats than Trudeau on election night but not a clear majority, and Trudeau does not resign but chooses to meet the new Commons and see if the minor party MPs and independents back him, what does Broadbent do? Does he insist Trudeau must resign? Or does he bargain for certain policies and actions?

Or suppose Trudeau and Clark are very close in MPs behind each other. Does Broadbent bargain for the best deal? In terms of policies or programs to be carried through Parliament in lieu of the NDP votes?

Suddenly Broadbent has a grander stature because of such possible scenarios after the next general vote. He may even become as puffed up with being the "balance of power" as did Bob Thompson (Social Credit; 1962-63) and David Lewis (NDP; 1972-74) in previous "minority" situations which followed the general elections of '62 and '72.

While the major party "ally" wants the third party's backing in order to fight the next election later with better auguries, the minor party and its leader hope to expand greatly its popularity, firstly for the programs it insists upon; secondly, for being reasonable for putting aside an immediate election, which, goes an axiom, the public never wants.

The illusions of Thompson, and then of Lewis, were smashed in the subsequent elections, a reminder Broadbent may need in these heady days when most people in politics are taking him more seriously.

I have no clear answer to those who ask me about what Broadbent and the NDP will do. The fact I was once a member of the party and an MP gives me some background but little assurance about the prospects.

It has been evident to me that since its formation no one at the top or around the top of the NDP has had a national strategy for partisan politics. One reason is obvious. It is a party which scorns the pragmatism, the lack of integrity, the corporate handmaiden roles, the unprincipled nature of the Liberals and Tories. In pulpit terms, the NDP says it cannot distinguish between the two.

Which do we prefer? Which one do we want to replace? Which one does history and its trends suggest we have the best chance of replacing as a major party?

The New Democrats of my acquaintance hate such questions. They prefer to say: a plague on both your houses, or to insist that it doesn't matter to the Canadian people.

Another powerful reason for not deciding which old party it should plan to drive into oblivion lies in what I callthe Knowles syndrome, after the great parliamentarian. He has dominated the caucus for most of 30 years, and he's always insisted the party should act in Parliament on the basis of what is before it — i.e., what motion; what bill; what question — not by some long-range strategy which says, for example: Hive the Grits and sweeten the Tories.

The Knowles syndrome looked marvellous when at work between the 1972 election and the early winter months of 1974. Then MacEachen and Trudeau decided that they'd now shaped up for another election and could do without the NDP. The syndrome makes for efficacious parliamentary performance but it postulates an unsubtle strategy vis a vis rival parties.

In the early '60s, I and a few others then in the party, such as Reid Scott and Frank Howard, used to argue that it was obvious the NDP should replace the Liberals as a major party.

All our parliamentary and electoral strategies should be bent to that end. We never got far with either the parliamentarians or the many in the party like David Lewis who, despite their deep suspicions of the Grits, really did feel they were more progressive and certainly more intellectually and academically respectable than the Tories.

It may now be the time for the anti-Grit strategy in the NDP. The Liberals are disappearing in Western Canada where the NDP is strongest. The potential gains for the NDP if it gets Trudeau and the Liberals out of power and the Tories in seem substantial. (Not immediately, of course!) In all of the West, to a good degree in Ontario, to a much lesser degree in the Maritimes, the NDP can be the "big" rival to the Tories in power, but not to the Grits.

And in Quebec, where neither NDP has much going, it doesn't matter much anymore. The NDP knows now that it isn't going to get any miracle there, in 1979 or 1984.

But do not bet the NDP will recognize and act upon this obvious evidence that in the long-term, for it to become one of the two alternative parties who get federal power, either the Tories or the Liberals must largely fade away. And it's been plain for 20 years, and it becomes plainer, that it would be both easier and more sensible for the NDP to knock back the Liberals. This means it should let the Tories have a run in power.

It seems to me, however, that Broadbent, like Lewis, has a deep respect for the Liberals and much disrespect for the Conservatives. So . . . !

DAVID AND JULIE . . . the ghosts of politics past

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

Politics is a dirty game, and two of the more sullied combatants are Julie Nixon, daughter of the former president of the United States, and David Eisenhower, grandson of the former president of the United States. United several years ago in holy wedlock, they are now practising the hammerlock — and the ghosts of politics past are to blame.

David, it seems, is writing a book about Dwight D. Eisenhower, while Julie is writing a biography of her mother, Pat Nixon. And both, inevitably, are dealing with the 1952 predicament of Richard M. Nixon, then the Republican vice-presidential candidate on Mr. Eisenhower's ticket. There were, we recall, charges that Mr. Nixon had been less than scrupulous in taking money from his supporters, a controversy sparked by the discovery of an $18,000 slush fund. Mr. Nixon, tears in his eyes, went on national television pleading that all he had accepted was a little dog named Checkers, and swearing he would not give the pup away.

Beyond that our recollectons grow dim, but no dimmer than those of the Eisenhowers. "They had an awful argument over the 1952 fund situation," says an acquaintance quoted in McCall's magazine. "David remarked that his grandfather really had nothing to do with trying to get Nixon off the ticket (because of the scandal) and Julie became furious. She went on about how her father had to take on Eisenhower and the whole crowd around him."

The spat should do little to hurt book sales, particularly if they stock the volumes in separate corners and dress them in little red trunks. But as marriages go, this one may go sooner than expected, since the images of Ike struggling desperately to keep the little man with the shifty eyes from following him to the White House is not one to promote marital harmony. (Let alone the spectre of Jacob Marley roaming about the house in a Republican cloth coat.)

They should have expected it, really. These mixed marriages never work out.

'Almost always works out badly for them'

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — With the Liberals and Conservatives neck and neck in the opinion polls, the New Democrats are said to be looking forward to enjoying the balance of power in the next House of Commons.

One wonders why they should be licking their lips, because such power almost always works out badly for them. They enjoy a few heady months of influence in which they extract a few policy concessions from the minority government they are supporting and then comes another election in which the voters flock to elect a majority government and the New Democrats get their come-uppance.

The old CCF elected 25 MPs in 1957 when John Diefenbaker formed his first minority Conservative government. The following year they were cut to eight MPs in the Tory landslide.

It was that defeat, in fact, that persuaded the CCFers that they had to transform their party if they hoped ever to win power, and the NDP emerged. The new party was not a great electoral success: It elected 19 members in 1962, 17 in 1963, 21 in 1965 and 22 in 1968.

When the Liberals sank to minority status in 1972, the New Democrats did quite well: 31 MPs. Under leader David lewis, they decided to support Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and his Liberals, rather than back Robert Stanfield and his Conservatives, who were only a seat or two behind.

Politicians will argue for years about that decision. Certainly the New Democrats wrung social policy concessions — for example, larger family allowances — from the Liberals, but they also allowed Trudeau to change his policies and his image. The result was that in the 1974 election, the New Democrats lost almost half their seats, electing only 16 MPs.

Had they placed Stanfield in power in 1972, they might have wrecked the Liberal party, splitting it between French and English Trudeau-lovers and Trudeau-haters, left and right wingers. The NDP might then have become the real opposition party.

On the other hand, had the NDP supported Stanfield and his largely English-speaking party and kicked out of power Trudeau and his Quebecers, the country could have been gravely divided and national survival deeply imperilled.

So perhaps Lewis and his party paid the price of putting national unity ahead of party advantage. Or perhaps they just guessed wrong. In any event, Ed Broadbent and his supporters may face just the same sort of problem after the next election.

Broadbent has made abundantly clear that he disapproves of Trudeau and all his work and would dearly love to drive him out of office. But if the NDP does find itself holding the balance and, in effect, appointing either Trudeau or Joe Clark as prime minister, Broadbent will have to consult far more than his personal prejudice.

He will have to consider the short- and long-term interests of both the country and his party. He will be under immense pressure from the media in public and from Trudeau and Clark in private and he will have to make the crucial decision in consultation with all NDP MPs, many of whom may be newly-elected.

The obvious democratic thing for the NDP to do will be to support the leader and party with the most seats in the Commons. But what if the party with the most seats has less votes than its principal rival, as may easily happen in our curious system?

Alternatively, the NDP may seek to bargain with the major parties, offering support to the party prepared to make the greatest policy concessions. But such deals don't last long or work out well for the NDP. The government gets the credit for introducing popular measures demanded by the NDP, and, at the first opportunity, calls another election.

A better strategy for the NDP, probably, would be to spell out during the election campaign exactly what it will want from a minority government in return for support, including three or four years of stable government.

A reasonable and moderate program of reform might attract many voters to the NDP and ensure a responsible period of minority government.

At the very least, the price the NDP should ask for support of either Trudeau or Clark would be electoral reform, introducing some form of proportional representation, so that in the next election the NDP would have a good chance of consolidating its position, instead of being wiped out in a stampede to majority rule.

The end of a love affair

By GARY LAUTENS
Toronto Star

Look, I'm an old Maple Leaf hockey fan.

The first fan letter I ever wrote was to Charlie Conacher. Syl Apps was my hero, and we used to have hot discussions about his merits in the '40s.

When I asked my wife for that first date in 1956 the way I thought I could impress her most was to take her to Maple Leaf Gardens.

That's how it's been over the years.

Me and hockey. A love affair.

However, the more brutal hockey has become, the less I've liked it. I refuse to pay money to watch fake hockey players paid to do nothing more than prevent real hockey players from playing hockey.

The other night I relented and went back to Maple Leaf Gardens to see my first in-person hockey game in two years. Toronto vs. Detroit.

Frankly, it was a shock even to me.

My beloved Leafs — why, they aren't even likable any more.

Take Lanny McDonald. A few years ago when I saw him on the street near Maple Leaf Gardens at the end of the season, I stopped him and thanked him for a wonderful season's play. He doesn't know me, but I just felt I should say something.

But there he was the other night, trying to take cheap shots like everyone else, cruising around the rink looking not for sparkling breakaways but to blindside someone or catch an opponent with his head down.

Is that what happens to a player of his calibre after a few years in that league?

I happen to think B.J. Salming is an incredible athlete, but he was slashing like the rest, complaining when he got a penalty, and then sulking when he got back on the ice like a little boy.

Dan Maloney, Dave Williams, well, you can almost go down the entire list. What has happened to that team?

Tough, okay. Bobbie Baun was tough, Red Horner was tough, Bob Pulford was tough. But chippy? It's not the way Red Kelly played the game, or Bob Goldham.

Of course one game isn't enough to judge any team, but I found myself actually cheering for Detroit, for Sale McCourt, Big Ned Nedomansky, Reed Larson.

The Leafs seemed, well, plain nasty, surly. They lost but it was the way they lost that bothered me. They lost without class. Without style.

Amazingly, nobody seemed to think that game unusual, not in the press reports I read. But after a two-year absence (watching on TV isn't the same) I was shocked.

After one refree's call (a good one in my opinion) somebody stood up behind me and bellowed, "Bull . . . .", "bull . . . ." over and over at the top of his lungs.

In front of me another inelegant customer raised the middle finger over and over in an obscene salute.

When an official got hit in the leg by a puck, a youngster (a nice looking lad of perhaps 13 with his father) shouted, "Hit him higher next time."

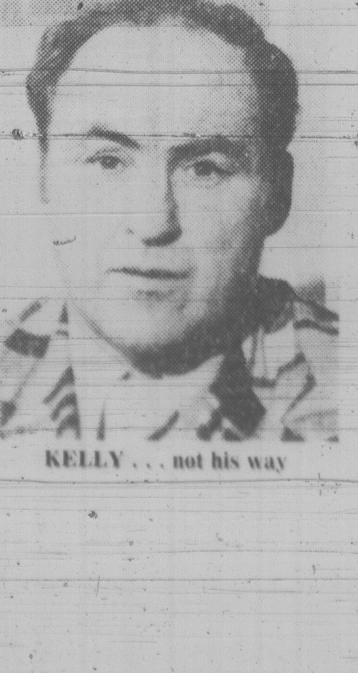
Lovely.

Call me a prude, out of date, an old bluestocking, but I'm not amused by verbal garbage. I think brutual hockey brutalizes the audience; and that is what we're apparently witnessing.

Is this what has become of Canada's national game? Is this what happened to my treasured Leafs, the Leafs of Conn Smythe, the Leafs that my generation idolized?

Well, count me out.

I'd rather have memories than the mayhem Harold Ballard is peddling at high prices these days at Maple Leaf Gardens.



KELLY . . . not his way

CATTLE

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. of 1,050 head at the Calgary public stockyards were mostly feeder cattle and stock calves. Too few slaughter cattle on offer early to establish trends. Heavy receipts of feeder cattle met a moderate demand at lower prices. Good feeder steers sold $3 lower while good feeder heifers sold $5 lower. Feeder cows traded steady to a good local demand. Good stock steer calves sold $4 lower and good stock heifer calves sold $5 lower.

ANNOUNCEMENT

GROUSE NEST RESORTS LTD. announces that Laurel Point Properties Ltd. of Vancouver, B.C. — consequent to its foreclosure action in a defaulted first mortgage — has taken possession as well as become owner of the property known as GROUSE NEST RESORT. This property located on the Sooke basin near Victoria, B.C. consists of 572 acres in part, commercially zoned, approximately 10,000 feet of waterfront and substantial improvements. These assets which are estimated at about six million dollars were awarded to Laurel Properties Ltd. in lieu of the repayment of a debt presently accrued to a sum of less than $2,500,000. The main respondents in the foreclosure proceedings in question are herewith informing whomsoever it may concern of their intentions to re-open the foreclosure action within the time limitation granted by law and take back this valuable property after re-payment of the indebtedness to the new owner (owners).

BRENTWOOD COLLEGE SCHOOL

SCHOLARSHIP AND BURSARY AID PROGRAM

Headmaster: W. T. Ross, B.A.

Mill Bay Post Office.
Telephone: 743-5521

1. Grade Eight to Eleven students, whose school records give evidence of strong academic performance, sound personal character and healthy citizenship, are invited to compete in ACADEMIC SCHOLARSHIP EXAMINATIONS on Saturday, April 14th, 1979. Ten awards will be made, each to the value of $500.00. Mandatory examination papers include English, Mathematics and Composition.
2. Additionally, we are pleased to announce that, quite apart from the above, a non-competitive BURSARY ASSISTANCE PROGRAM with grants to a maximum of $3,000 is available to students in cases of genuine financial need.

'Death Knell for Fisheries'

An agreement ending a dispute over logging near a salmon-spawning river in the Queen Charlotte Islands sounds the death knell for fisheries in the province, says the president of the B.C.Wildlife Federation.

Richard Cole said Thursday in a telegram to federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc that his organization is shocked and dismayed by the absolute sellout of the Fisheries Act by senior fisheries staff.

Cole said the compromise of the act has "utterly destroyed the morale of your enforcement section" and said LeBlanc should apologize to fisheries staff members by firing Wally Johnston, provincial director-general of fisheries.

Federal fisheries officials and the provincial forests ministry agreed Tuesday to permit Q.C. Timber Ltd. to continue logging near a salmon-spawning creek adjacent to Rennell Sound in the Queen Charlotte Islands, off B.C.'s northwest coast.

Pacific Press Talks Recess

VANCOUVER (CP) — Talks aimed at ending the strike-lockout at Pacific Press recessed Thursday after a week of meetings at a Palo Alto, Calif., hotel.

Paddy Sherman, publisher of the morning Province, said some progress was made but added he is not prepared to say on which issues.

About 1,400 workers at Pacific Press, which produces The Province and evening Sun, have been off the job since Nov. 1.

The main outstanding issue has been manning clauses which determine how many pressmen and mailroom workers are on a given shift. Jurisdiction over some editorial employees also has been an issue.

Sherman said in a telephone interview from his West Vancouver home that he expects the parties will meet again "in a week to 10 days."

He said the mediator, San Francisco lawyer John Kagel, asked for the recess to attend to his other business matters.

Kagel was instrumental in settling the last contract at Pacific Press without a strike. That contract expired Oct. 31.

The parties began talking last Thursday and continued through the weekend. Sun publisher Clark Davey joined the talks Sunday and Sherman flew to the scene Monday.

Both said at the time they would remain at the talks until a settlement was achieved or talks broke down.

Court Limits to 10 SFU Picket Line

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court ruled Thursday that striking clerical workers can not post more than 10 pickets at the main entrance to the Simon Fraser University campus in nearby Burnaby.

Mr. Justice Victor Dreier also ruled that the pickets, or those helping them, can not impede, intimidate, assault or threaten those who cross the picket line.

About 650 non-teaching workers, members of the Association of University and College Employees, have been on strike at the university since March 8.

During the past few days, there have been up to 100 pickets at the main entrance.

Some students and faculty have been delayed by pickets while trying to get to the university.

Meanwhile, former SFU president Pauline Jewett, now a federal New Democratic Party candidate, joined the picket line Wednesday.

Jewett said she supported the strikers because their demands are fair, and the university should not be taking "such a stubborn position."

The university has offered the workers a six-per-cent wage increase from Nov. 22, 1978 to March 31, 1980. The union wants a nine-per-cent increase.

Confrontation Threat By B.C. Teachers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Confrontation could replace co-operation in teachers' dealings with the provincial government, says Al Blakey, newly-elected president of the British Columbia Teachers' Federation.

Blakey, 42, a city elementary school teacher, polled almost double the votes of his nearest opponent in federation elections on Wednesday.

Blakey said that under his administration, the federation will re-establish support in the community and constructively oppose the educational policies of Education Minister Pat McGeer.

The minister is trying to treat students as if they are memory banks designed to absorb information, he said.

Larry Kuehn of Kamloops was elected first vice-president.

Blakey said that B.C. teachers are tired of being used as scapegoats by the provincial government. The policy of total co-operation of the previous federation executive will be changed and teachers will fight any criticism they feel is unfair.

"Morale is low and while our members are unhappy with public criticism, they are especially unhappy that the minister of education has chosen for himself the role of chief critic of the education system," he said.

Blakey said while the federation plans to take no political stance in the next provincial election, it will make education an issue.

Fish Plant Workers March

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — More than 100 shoreworkers marched through the streets here Thursday demanding more work and job security at area fish-processing plants.

A spokesman for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, which represents the workers, said the protest was aimed at the Canadian Fishing Co.

Mike Darnell said about 30 grading jobs at the plant were lost because the company agreed to sell ungraded herring roe to a Japanese buyer.

A company spokesman said that six to 10 jobs were affected.

The march followed a walkout by shoreworkers at six fish-processing plants Wednesday to protest layoffs. The same day, about 300 workers attended a meeting with Iona Campagnolo, who represented the Skeena riding in the last Parliament.

GARDOM
. . . complaints "goofy"

BATvans Fine—A-G

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Thursday that B.C.'s Breath Alcohol Testing vans are working well and claims to the contrary are "goofy and totally irresponsible."

Gardom said there have only been two cases where charges were dismissed because of doubts about the accuracy of the breath tests.

The attorney-general's comments came after Nelson-Creston NDP MLA Lorne Nicolson said the government should spend its money on enforcing laws against drinking drivers rather than on its counterattack program.

The BAT vans carry a machine used to measure the amount of alcohol in a person's blood by analyzing their breath.

Nicolson said the government is pulling a con job.

"With competent legal protection, anybody can beat evidence gathered in a BAT van — the police don't use them."

Crew Chatter Shares Crash Blame

Sweeper Relieved

CRANBROOK (CP) — The operator of a snow sweeper that was on the runaway when a Pacific Western Airlines crashed in February, 1978, is relieved that a federal report on the crash has been released.

Terry George said Thursday that he knew from the beginning that the crash was not his fault.

The pilot tried to abort the landing when he spotted the sweeper but the plane crashed, killing 43 of the 46 aboard.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The failure of Flight 314 to report its final approach to Cranbrook airport and unnecessary talk on Pacific Western Airlines' (PWA) radio frequency was an "unacceptable standard of cockpit practice and discipline," says a federal report on the February, 1978, crash of a PWA Boeing 737.

Transport Canada, in its final report on the crash which killed 43 persons, said the estimated time of arrival given by Calgary air traffic control was considerably in error and resulted in a snow sweeper being on the runway when the plane was landing.

The estimated time of arrival relayed by Calgary air traffic control was 1:05 p.m. MST after Flight 314 took off from Calgary. The last call either to or from the aircraft during the approach was at 12:47 p.m. MST when the aircraft was told there was a snow sweeper on the runway.

At 12:55 p.m. MST Flight 314 reported "we're gonna crash."

"It would seem logical for a pilot to request an update on the runway state, to determine whether the equipment was clear of the runway, and finally, to report by the Skookum beacon as was the common practice," the report says.

It says evidence indicates that one very high frequency transceiver in the plane was on a company frequency during the time the Cranbrook landing information was transmitted. The other transceiver was on an a radio frequency and the voice of first officer Peter Van Oort, 25, was identified on the tape.

Transport Canada said it appeared the captain was not aware of the snowsweeper advisory.

The flight, carrying 44 passengers and a crew of five, aborted its landing almost the moment it touched down at the southeastern British Columbia airport to avoid the snow-clearing equipment.

The aircraft lifted off but the left engine thrust reverser doors deployed in flight and the plane crashed off the runway and burst into a ball of orange flame and black smoke. One stewardess and five passengers survived.

Transport Canada says the flight crew did not report by the Skookum beacon on final approach, as was the normal practice at Cranbrook.

Regulatory provisions concerning mandatory pilot position reporting during instrument approaches were inadequate, the report says.

There is no legal requirement for a pilot to make position reports during an instrument approach unless requested by air traffic control.

The lack of effective regulation weakens the advisory system, Transport Canada says. The liaison between air traffic services, telecommunications and airports services were not well enough developed to provide a reliable fail-safe flight information service.

"It is obvious that the pilots were taken by surprise when they saw the obstruction on the runway, otherwise they would neither have touched down nor selected reverse if a go-around had been foreseen," the report says.

"It is most likely that, as reported by the vehicle operator, the snow sweeper was obscured by the snow thrown up by its rotating brush, against the general snow background."

Visibility was about three-quarters of a mile when the crash occurred.

The pilots lost control of the aircraft after the left thrust reverser deployed in flight.

Transport Canada said the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration design standards under which the Boeing 737 was constructed did not adequately provide for the possibility of an aborted landing after touchdown.

Contacted in Seattle, a spokesman for Boeing said the report was too technical for an immediate comment. PWA said it would have no comment on the document. The crash has resulted in a number of lawsuits currently before the courts.

The report also says a number of stress factors might have affected the performance of Capt. Chris Miles, especially surprise at seeing the snow sweeper on the runway, uncertainty as to whether the plane would clear the sweeper and concern about the instructions in the Boeing 737 operations manual about not attempting a go-around after reverse thrust has been initiated.

Transport Canada says the crew either released a corrective right rudder action or applied left rudder, starting a yaw and roll at a critical phase of the flight, but the possibility of controlling the aircraft in the given situation was only marginal.

Transport Canada says that although most of the passengers were killed by the impact of the crash, some who succumbed to toxic fumes and fire might have been saved if firefighting facilities had been adequate.

The Cranbrook and Kimberley fire departments arrived about 20 minutes after the crash but the report says it was an hour before they were able to approach "within effective firefighting range" because of deep snow bordering the runway.

Socred Opposed

Socred MLA George Mussallem said Thursday B.C. doesn't need the experimental nuclear fusion reactor that Science Minister Pat McGeer is trying to lure to the province.

McGeer has called the proposed $1 billion project a huge international development and has said B.C. eventually will have to rely on nuclear energy.

Mussallem, the member for Dewdney, said there is no need for the experimental project, except possibly to assist in the development of technology.

Minister Sued In Custody Battle

VANCOUVER (CP) — A city couple is suing former human resources minister Bill Vander Zalm and Victor Belknapp, superintendent of child welfare, following a child-custody battle.

Allan Adams and his wife Sue-Anne filed the damage suit in British Columbia Supreme Court in the wake of their efforts to retain custody of their children.

The couple say in the suit that their three children were taken away from them by human-resources personnel in December, 1977, and put in a foster home. The Adams say that no reason was given for the action.

They say that a court case over custody of the children took more than one year before they were granted custody of two of their three children.

Road Deaths, Injuries On Rise Again

Motor Vehicle Branch statistics released Thursday show 33 people died on provincial highways in January compared to 29 in the same month a year ago.

The number of people injured increased 36 per cent to 2,662 from 1,962 in January, 1978.

There were 10,763 reported accidents during the month.

New Life for Colquitz Creek

Saanich and the provincial government will join forces to turn Colquitz Creek into a major recreational corridor.

Sam Bawlf, minister responsible for the Provincial Capital Commission, and Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier announced the program Thursday.

Bawlf said the first step is a major planning and development study to come up with recommendations and a budget for the project.

The environment ministry, which is already undertaking extensive fisheries enhancement work on the creek, will join the Capital Commission and Saanich in the planning.

Bawlf said he hoped plans will be completed before the end of the year.

Couvelier said he was delighted with the project because it will lead to a solid, long-term effort at rehabilitating the stream.

"In the past development of the creek has been a spasmodic thing that we tackled only when funds arose," said Couvelier.

"It's going to take a long-term project and it's going to take a real injection of seed money," he said.

Bawlf said that with completion of the Saanich Peninsula water pipeline more water from Elk and Beaver Lakes can be released into Colquitz, where fish and wildlife branch biologists are already working at improving fish habitat.

The minister envisaged the day when the walkway around the Inner Harbor will link with the Gorge, and with footpaths along Colquitz.

The Colquitz is a spawning stream for sea-run cutthroat trout and coho. The runs of trout and salmon, however, have dwindled over the years because of degradation to the urban watercourse.

Biologists believe fish can be brought back in large numbers if the stream is rehabilitated.

FIFTEEN YEARS after Victorians passed a hospital construction referendum, the first sod was turned Thursday for the new Victoria General Hospital on Helmcken Road. To the playing of Voices of Spring, Health Minister Bob McClelland manned a mechanical shovel to start construction while placard-carrying citizens protested a sewage-receiving station planned across the street. The hospital is expected to be completed by mid-1982.

Spying on Labor Denied by Blais

Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais Thursday denied saying that the RCMP security service is conducting surveillance of segments of the B.C. labor movement.

The federal minister was quoted in a United Press Canada wire story as having told the New Westminster Columbian newspaper that trade union activities are being watched by the security service.

But Thursday Blais said the RCMP is not conducting surveillance on any labor union or legitimate organization in Canada.

"No security investigation is begun on any individual because he or she is a member of a labor union," he said.

He said he made that statement to the B.C. attorney-general's office and the B.C. Federation of Labor upon their request for clarification.

Engineers Back Deregulation

The president of the Association of Professional Engineers of B.C. has urged engineers to suport the aims and objectives of the deregulation ministry.

Speaking at a meeting of the Victoria branch of the association, Russell Fraser said it is essential for governments to constantly review the extent and cost of regulations.

"This is particularly true in areas such as energy and environment, where there sometimes is a high level of emotion," Fraser said.

He said the association was pleased when the provincial government set up the ministry to cut red tape.

"We were equally pleased that they added a sunset clause to that legislation so that another bureaucracy was not established. Those are healthy signs."

Fraser said engineers are in a good position to present proposals to the ministry for the benefit of everyone in the province.

"We should not take deregulation as another exercise in futililty or something we can passively become involved with," he said.

"We should actively look for ways to assist our government in this endeavor."

He said he plans to ask committees and branches of the association to participate in a program to assist the ministry in its work.

Stalemate At CHEK

A stalemate has been reached in contract talks between CHEK Television Ltd. of Victoria and members of the National Association of Broadcasters and Electronic Technicians.

Negotiations for a new contract — the old one expired February 28 — began March 19 and broke off this week.

No new talks are scheduled.

The major issue is wages. The union is seeking a two-year contract with a 14-per-cent increase in the first year and 12 per cent in the second.

The company has offered 29.8 per cent over a three-year period ending Feb. 28, 1982.

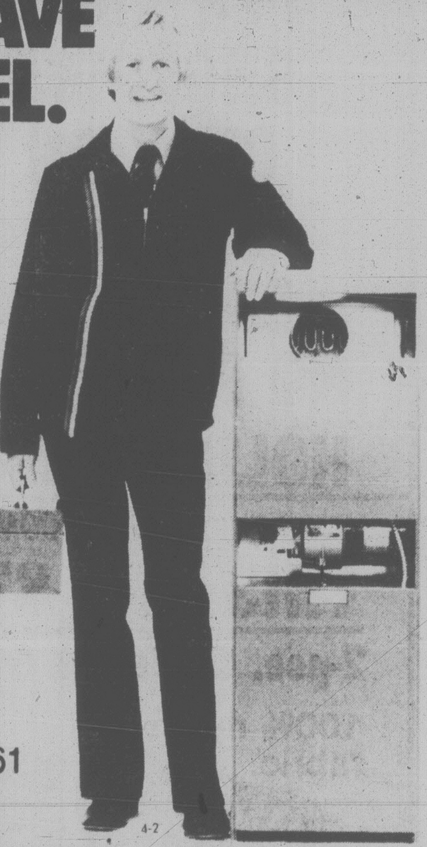
ESSO ECONOBLUE: THE NEW LITTLE FURNACE THAT CAN SAVE A LOT OF FUEL.



The new Esso Econoblue takes up only 3½ square feet of floor space. Yet it is designed for maximum fuel economy.

This oil-fired, forced air system uses a better mixture of air and oil vapour for more complete combustion. And because the mixture is also recycled, you get more heat out of every drop of oil.

If your old furnace works at 66% efficiency, for example, Econoblue could reduce oil consumption by 20%. This means if you now use 750 gallons of fuel a year, Econoblue could save you 150 gallons.

So, if your furnace has been showing signs of age lately, don't wait until it gives up altogether.

Call Esso Home Comfort. The sooner you do, the sooner you'll start saving fuel.

OTTAWA — Weston interests acquiring control of the Hudson's Bay Company would mean that they would also control Simpson's Limited and would be in a position to control the largest single block of shares in Simpsons-Sears, Herb Gray who represented Windsor West in the last parliament, warned Thursday.

The controlling bid of $40 a share by George Weston Ltd. caused an immediate response on the stock market. Shares in Hudson's Bay Co. rose $5 Thursday to $33.50 from last Friday's close, while Weston shares fell $1.25 to $23.75 from Friday, when trading was halted in both companies' shares before Weston released its offer.

Gray wrote to Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Warren Allmand urging that the Combines Branch immediately investigate the proposed takeover to see if the takeover would involve possible breaches of the Combines act. If breaches of the act were involved he urged the minister to take action under the act.

Unlike the Thomson interests, which had made an earlier bid to takeover the Bay, the Weston interests thrugh its retail supermarkets (Loblaws) would appear to be in direct competition with Hudson's Bay Company in a number of important product lines, said Gray.

Alberta Facing Surplus

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government expects to have a surplus of more than $4.5 billion by the end of the 1978-79 fiscal year ending March 31.

The government's quarterly financial summary, released Thursday, shows that the surplus stood at $3.2 billion as of Dec. 31, 1978, but notes that the surplus is growing all the time because of oil and gas revenues.

Resource revenue contributed just more than $2 billion to provincial coffers in the 1977-78 fiscal year. This year resource revenues are expected to top $3 billion.

Yugoslavs Clear Bakic

TITOGRAD, Yugoslavia (AP) — Canadian Jack (Jakov) Bakic Thursday was acquitted of war crimes that carried the death penalty.

"I knew I was innocent," explained the overjoyed naturalized Canadian from Edmonton as relatives gathered around, kissing him and pumping his hand and crying.

Bakic, 66, was picked up by police when he went back to his native Yugoslavia for a holiday last May. He went on trial Feb. 26, charged with mistreating and executing Marshal Tito's Partisan Communists during the Second World War. Bakic was alleged to be a member of the Chetnik royalist troops.

About 50 witnesses were brought to the court to give evidence.

Bakic, who admitted doing some services for the Chetnik movement, spent 10 months in jail. He pleaded not guilty to all the major charges.

The prosecutor maintained that all the major charges were sustained and demanded the maximum sentence, death. But presiding Judge Bozidar Vuksanovic concluded that there was no substantial evidence against Bakic "and the testimony incriminating him was based on conjecture."

Bakic said he never commanded or took part in any firing squad that executed Partisans and he never mistreated prisoners.

Many of the witnesses gave contradictory evidence. Some witnesses quoted what they had heard about Bakic rather than what they saw or experienced.

Bakic said he returned to Yugoslavia last May to visit relatives in Montenegro and he had no fear or concern about wartime events.

Higgitt's Stand Weakened

OTTAWA (CP) — Retired RCMP Commissioner W. L. Higgitt's claim that documentary evidence would support his contention that cabinet ministers knew of RCMP illegalities was weakened Thursday.

Higgitt had to concede to W. A. Kelly, counsel to a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing, that the documents set out what the RCMP wanted to do, not what it actually was doing.

The commission is trying to find out whether Higgitt and other senior Mounties covered up illegal acts by the force or whether cabinet ministers were informed and covered up before Parliament.

Higgitt said Oct. 24 that ministers were informed and that he had documentary evidence to this effect.

In general, the documents would have led readers to believe the RCMP was obeying the law but wanted it changed to enable security men to infiltrate terrorist groups and break laws without facing prosecution and imprisonment.

Higgitt, however, insisted that he had been frank with cabinet ministers about what the RCMP was doing.

Notes of one meeting said it was agreed that the RCMP had to be "totally frank" with cabinet ministers about the problems involved.

"It would also be important for ministers not to misinterpret the commission's (Higgitt's) previous denials of criminal activity on the part of the force . . . ."

Kelly asked Higgitt whether he had in fact made such denials to cabinet ministers.

Higgitt replied that he had [illegible] ministers what was going on. He said he couldn't understand the reference in the minutes.

Government Lawyer Joseph Nuss objected, saying that Higgitt again was making "the same broad allegation" and wasn't being forced to back it up.

"You can close the door of a bird cage but the song keeps coming out," Mr. Justice David C. McDonald, the commission chairman, told Nuss.

CDC Earnings Soar

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Development Corp. announced Thursday that earnings increased by more than 50 per cent during 1978, while revenue exceeded the billion-dollar level for the first time in the corporation's history.

The corporation said in a news release that profits rose to $36.4 million or 62 cents a share, compared with $23.8 million or 21 cents a share in 1977.

Revenue was $1.3 billion, compared with $724.1 million the previous year.

H. Anthony Hampson, CDC president and chief executive officer, said some of the corporation's earlier investments began to bear fruit in 1978.

"Polysar, for example, more than doubled its contribution to our earnings," he said. "Texasgulf Inc., in which we hold a controlling interest, increased its contribution by 23 per cent despite soft metals prices and our new processing division earned a profit in its first months under CDC ownership."

Hampson said earnings were up in every CDC division, even though the rate of growth of the economy as a whole was not strong during 1978.

Viet Envoy Ordered Out

OTTAWA (UPC) — A Vietnamese diplomat ordered to leave Canada denied Thursday that he is an intelligence officer doing work "incompatible with his diplomatic status."

External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson ordered Ho Xuan Dich to leave Canada within 72 hours after an RCMP investigation revealed he was an intelligence officer engaged in "activities incompatible with his diplomatic status."

Jamieson requested Vietnamese ambassador Tran Tuam Anh to make immediate arrangements for the 48-year-old Second Secretary to leave Canada within 72 hours.

"I will be leaving within 72 hours, but I completely reject all of these charges — I am not an intelligence officer. I am just a diplomat," Ho said in an interview translated by his secretary, Le Luong Minh.

"This is only an action against Vietnam taken by Canada that will affect the goodwill and the relations between the two countries," Ho said.

However, he refused comment on whether the small Vietnamese embassy of four officers might be shut down in retaliation.

After the RCMP report said Tran was engaged in intelligence work, an external affairs communique said had been "declared persona non grata."

A department official said Thursday Ho had been interfering in the affairs of the Vietnamese community in Canada by attempting to apply pressure designed to influence the ideology and loyalties of landed immigrants and Vietnamese residents in Canada.

"Such action can only be considered an infringement both of the liberties of Canadians and Canadian residents of whatever origin to express political opinions and of their freedom to engage in group activities without external political influences and pressure," stated the communique.

The RCMP investigation also claimed Ho threatened to "retaliate against relatives still in Vietnam."

Computer Content With a Handshake

TORONTO (CP) — Keys may soon be replaced by a kind of computerized handshake.

A Canadian company is developing a computer system that opens household doors when the computer recognizes the shape and markings of a person's hand, previously fed into it by a plastic identification card, or simply by a person presenting his hand to the unit.

Promoters think it is the ultimate security device — designed to limit access to restricted areas and classified computer data. They are in the process of selling a unit to a Toronto car dealer who plans to use it to stop cheating by employees who punch a co-worker's time card. The unit would also do the payroll at the same time.

Security Information Systems, of Toronto, a wholly-owned Canadian company, has the Canadian and British rights for the system, known as Identimat 2000. The Identimat comes in two models, the card and cardless units which are priced at about $6,000 each.

Lost Bags Costly

MONTREAL (CP) — Air France was ordered Thursday to pay Montreal clothing designer Donald Ventura $1,600 for losing his luggage on a Paris-Montreal flight in 1975.

Mr. Justice Charles Gonthier of Quebec Superior Court made the award after rejecting the airline's contention that an article of the Warsaw Convention on international airline liability restricted the passenger to damages of about $68 per kilogram of baggage.

Mr. Justice Gonthier ruled the airline was not covered by the article because it had not observed all the regulations required in issuing a baggage check.

Ventura had originally sued the airline for more than $5,000, saying the airline lost patterns and photographs he had obtained in Europe for his work.

CLC An NDP Cost?

OTTAWA (UPC) — Canada's Chief Electoral Officer said Thursday he will question the close affiliation of Canadian Labor Congress President Dennis McDermott and the New Democratic Party to determine whether the NDP has to add the labor leader's campaigning to their election expenses.

"This is a very grey area," Jean-Marc Hamel told reporters during a briefing on the May election. "My first reaction is that this is an authorized election expense and does not have to be accounted for — but I am saying that with all due reservations.

"There is no cost to Mr. McDermott making a speech with Ed Broadbent (The NDP leader) but I will have to look at each of these cases closely because the act needs some tightening up in these areas."

The Election Act stipulates that there is freedom of speech and recognized groups can become involved in public issues. Organized groups can also run paid political ads.

However, the parties must declare the salaries of all workers unless the campaigning is done by volunteers or workers on holidays.

CAMPAIGNING through Saskatchewan, Prime Minister Trudeau arrived in Saskatoon with Transport Minister Otto Lang Thursday evening. After campaign speeches there, he went to North Battleford, then Edmonton.

Campaign on in Ernest: Leaders Swap Swipes

Canadian Press

Early heat developed Thursday as the campaign for the May 22 federal election started in ernest, only four days after Prime Minister Trudeau called it.

Liberals, Conservatives and a New Democratic Party premier were drawn into the continuing fight over provincial control of resources.

The prime minister, who has been calling for strong central government to protect Canadians from selfish actions of resource-rich provinces, met charges of divisiveness from Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney.

Joe Clark set off on his first election campaign as Progressive - Conservative leader with a pledge to work with the provinces and the statement that a central issue in the election campaign will be leadership.

Liberals said that a main target for Trudeau is Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed. Clark announced without apology that he is a friend of Lougheed.

New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent swiped at both the Liberals and the Conservatives, said a major issue of the campaign is the need for an industial strategy put together with thorough federal-provincial co-operation and said the Liberal election slogan — a Decade of Development — should be a Decade of Drift. He called Clark Mr. Gas and said the Tory would do as the multi-national petroleum companies say he should.

Trudeau, who strongly pressed the Liberal line that unity is a major issue in the campaign — and implied it would be treason to think otherwise — singled out Saskatewan and Alberta for criticism in Toronto.

He said those provinces don't want the federal government to have the power to adminster the country for the benefit of all Canadians.

Blakeney was asked for comment and said a man who wants to be prime minister should not set region against region.

Transport Minister Otto Lang, seeking re-election in Saskatoon, told a reporter that Blakeney misunderstood Trudeau. He said the federal government wants to make sure it can make Canada's resourses available to all Canadians in times of energy crisis. It had no thought of taking away the resource financial benefits from the province. But he said Lougheed would not give the federal government any say in resources under any circumstances.

Clark noted that Trudeau criticized his friendship with Lougheed. He said a Conservative government would work with the provinces and avoid the confrontation of the Trudeau era.

The government wanted to develop the resources of areas such as Thunder Bay.

Clark was speaking to an enthusiastic crowd in a region that voted solidly Liberal in the last election. He then flew to Toronto. Trudeau flew to Saskatoon from Toronto and spends today in Saskatchewan and Alberta which has but four Liberal MPs.

Broadbent spoke at York University, where he was professor of political science before he was elected to the Commons ion 1968.

He was to spend the day in his constituency of Oshawa, Ont., and St. Catharines.

Broadbent called for broad federal-provincial cooperation in achieving five-year development plans. Development of these plans would take parliamentarians past the usual budget debates into new areas.

ÉLECTION 79

Margaret Stays Out

TORONTO (UPC) — Margaret Trudeau said today she does not intend to make any personal appearances in Canada to promote sales of her book Beyond Reason because of the federal election campaign.

The estranged wife of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, who is now campaigning for re-election May 22, said the decision was hers alone.

"I have made this decision without pressure from any persons or parties and because of my concern that to do so may divert the attention of the media and electorate from the issues before them."

12 Parties Possible

OTTAWA (CP) — There is a possibility of 12 parties running candidates in the May 22 election, said Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel Thursday.

At the time of his statement, only six parties had officially registered. These were the Liberal Party of Canada, the Progressive Conservative Party of Canada and the New Democratic Party, the Communist Party of Canada and the Marxist-Leninst Party.

The remaining six parties which could participate are the Canada Party, the Parti Rhinoceros the Libertarian Party of Canada, the United Provincials National Party of Canada, the National Reform Party and the Union Populaire.

The Union Populaire is a Quebec separatist party, not officially associated with the Parti Quebecois.

The Montreal-based Parti Rhinoceros is an anarchist group which has participated in several federal elections.

Dracula Really Out of Coffin

Scott's World

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD — Count Dracula is alive and thriving — as he has been for the past 512 years — although he is more visible than ever.

The blood-sucking vampire is the subject of a Broadway play, a television series and two motion pictures after years of lying dormant in his coffin with only occasional forays into activity since 1931when Dracula became a hit movie.

Hungarian-born Bela Lugosi proved that if a movie actor plays a single role brilliantly once in his life he will become forever associated with the characterization.

The white-faced, gimlet-eyed Lugosi played Dracula in a serious vein only once, 48 years ago. At his death in 1956 his obituaries inevitably tied him to the weirdo Transylvania vampire.

Actually, Lugosi played Dracula twice, the second time in a 1948 turkey titled Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein."

He did, however, play all sorts of middle European vampire types in the '30s and '40s, wearing a flowing cape, black suits, fangs and red-rimmed eyes. He eventually became a drug addict and died in near obscurity.

Dracula was revived somewhat in a dozen English horror films, most of which starred Christopher Lee. John Carradine once assayed the role as did David Niven, playing an aging Dracula. There was even a black version of the bloodthirsty count in Blacula."

George Hamilton will soon be seen as Dracula in Love at First Bite.

Roul Julia stars in the Broadway Dracula from which a movie is being made starring Frank Longella in the title role and Laurence Olivier.

Most visible Dracula at the moment is Michael Nouri, who portrays the kooky Count in The Course of Dracula, a weekly 20-minute segment of NBC-TV's Cliffhangers. It may become an hourly series next season.

Nouri, whose family comes from the Middle East — "My father was born in Baghdad" — is handsome, friendly and 34 years old. He looks more like a leading man than the Balkan nobleman jugular freak.

Dracula was the brainstorm of Bram Stoker, an English novelist who wrote the Gothic horror story of the 19th century.

Nouri read the old book before accepting the role. It scared him enough to convince him he could play the role in the TV series.

"It's a very compelling story," Nouri said. "And I guess it really got to Lugosi. He was so much into the part that I understand he was buried with his cape on. But that won't happen to me.

"The way I see it, Transylvania is sort of the Appalachia of Romania. And God knows Dracula had a problem about turning into a vampire bat. So I sort of play the part fang-in-cheek.

"He's the hero of the show, so I do my best to make him sympathetic. It's no easy task to make a guy look good who lures beautiful women into his lair so he can suck the blood from their necks.

"You have to see him as a tragic figure who destroys the object of his loves."

Nouri's Dracula is as susceptible to religious symbolism and daylight as was Lugosi, and heaven help him should anyone show up with a wooden stake while he's grabbing a few Zs in his coffin.

A crucifix or a few drops of holy water terrify the count who is destined to live forever providing he can escape the trappings of Christianity.

"We try to avoid the camp aspect involved in the cliff-hanger format," Nouri said, "and play Dracula seriously as they did in the old movies.

"Before starting the show I saw several 'Dracula' pictures. Christopher Lee was my favorite in the role. But Lugosi was in a class by himself. He originated the role as far as I'm concerned.

"We've focused our stories on the tragic curse of Dracula rather than the fangs. He is a man who has been in a predicament for more than 500 years. He cannot be exposed to sunlight and he is destined to drink blood to exist.

"We try to have serious things going in an absurd context. Our aim is to have viewers feel sorry for this man.

"There's a certain sex appeal about Dracula for women viewers. He never attacks his victims. He lures them into his own quarters. They come to him of their own volition. He is very cool and laid back.

"When I walk into a restaurant or other public places, a lot of women recognize me and show me their throats for laughs. And I get letters from ladies telling me I can bite their necks any time.

"The popularity of Dracula is really the element of fear which both attracts and repulses people. Most of us like to be shaken up and scared a little bit, especially by the bizarre and unusual.

"The role gives an actor an opportunity to pull out all the stops and I'm having the time of my life playing the old boy."

Israeli Upsets Korchnoi Bid

LONE PINE, Calif. (Reuter) — Vladimir Liberzon of Israel upset favorite Victor Korchnoi in the fifth round of the Lone Pine International Chess Tournament Thursday night.

Liberzon has five points and is tied with four other grands masters for first place.

Korchnoi, who defected from the Soviet Union and now lives in Switzerland, resigned following an adjournment after seven hours of play.

With his victory, Liberzon joins grand masters Florin Gheorghiu of Romania, Gennadi Sosonko of the Netherlands, Yugoslav Dragutin Sahovic and Anatoly Lein of the United States, in the top spot.

End of 'Fish War' Sighted

WASHINGTON (CP) — An end to the "fish war" between Canada and the United States seems in sight with the signing of four agreements dealing with fishing rights and maritime boundaries Thursday.

Canadian and U.S. negotiators say they hope commercial fishermen who have been forbidden to enter the other country's waters since last June can resume normal operations by summer.

The main agreement sends a dispute over boundaries in the fish-rich Georges Bank in the Gulf of Maine off the East Coast to a five-judge panel of the International Court of Justice for binding arbitration. It is the first time the two countries have agreed to this novel approach for settling a disagreement.

Another agreement sets up a joint fisheries commission, staffed by members from each country, to handle management of stocks of fish and to resolve any problems that arise.

Two other agreements put into legal language previously- announced arrangements for the two coasts.

For example, Canadian fishermen are to be allowed to fish halibut off the Alaskan coast for two more years, while Americans can take groundfish off the B.C. coast for the same time.

The B.C. fishermen get two million pounds of halibut this year and one million pounds in 1980. The Washington fishermen get 3,250 tonnes of groundfish this year and next.

After that all reciprocal fishing off the West Coast is to end.

Still to be resolved are boundary disputes between the two countries on the West Coast off the Strait of Juan de Fuca between Washington State and B.C., off Dixon Entrance between B.C. and the Alaskan panhandle and in the potentially oil and gas-rich Beaufort Sea between Alaska and the Yukon.

The dispute arises from the declaration by Canada and the U.S. States of 200-mile fishing limits in 1977. Previously, each country claimed rights only for the area within 12 miles of its coast and the larger limits created overlapping boundaries.

In Vancouver, Jack Nichol, president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, said the so-called Juneau Treaty related to the halibut-groundfish catch was opposed by all industry representatives on the West Coast.

Federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc had set up an advisory group with broad representation to help in the negotiations and the whole group unanimously opposed the treaty.

"It makes no sense to set up an advisory group and then go against their unanaimous opinion.

"It makes a complete mockery out of the whole thing."

Nichol said one aspect of the East Coast agreement that concerns his union is that it allows for third-party arbitration to decide controversial boundary issues.

The UFAWU believes that each party should negotiate with whatever clout they have without third-party intervention because otherwise there will be a compromise solution rather than either of the parties getting what is deemed justly theirs.

West Areas Gypped On Bus Service: Kahl

Colwood and Langford are being short-changed on bus services, Lyle Kahl, Esquimalt Socred MLA, said today.

"I'm concerned about the lack of adequate bus service compared to other areas in Greater Victoria," said Kahl. "We feel we aren't getting our fair share."

Kahl said Colwood and Langford are short on urban amenities, such as theatres, that are readily available in Victoria and consequently most residents have to travel a lot.

"There are a large number of kids out there hitchhiking all over the place and I've even seen senior citizens hitching," said Kahl.

He expects to meet Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm within the next week to 10 days to discuss the matter.

"What I'm asking for is a more equitable distribution of the bus service," said Kahl.

3 Do Nut Franchisers Quit Their Affiliation

Financially-distressed Do Nut King Restaurants Ltd. has received another setback.

Its three franchise holders in the Victoria area have served notice on the company they want out.

Steve Mawdsley, manager of the outlet on Admirals Road, said today he and the other two managers, Joyce Foss at Elk Lake and John Rempel at Langford, handed in their notice of termination of a franchise agreement with the company earlier this week.

Mawdsley said the issue involves a breach of contract but would not elaborate.

The three, who intend to form their own company, removed their Do Nut King signs Wednesday and will hoist new Do Nut House signs next week.

Troubles in the Do Nut King operation surfaced two months ago when members of the RCMP commercial crime section raided the company's office and seized 50 boxes of records and documents.

Sgt. Steve Holotuk said today the investigation has only just begun and will take at least another five months.

He declined to comment on the nature of the probe.

No charges have been laid.

Meanwhile, a representative of Can-Con West Holdings Ltd. of Vancouver is in Victoria looking into the possibility of taking over the company. A decision is expected to be made by April 15.

Four Stores Lose $1M

Four major department stores in Victoria are losing $1 million a year between them through shoplifting, employee theft and sloppy bookkeeping, a member of Saanich police's crime prevention unit said today.

Constable Allan Lamb would not identify the stores but said the figure points out an alarming increase in losses reported by area merchants.

Lamb said the total loss probably runs into the tens of millions of dollars.

In areas such as computer and employee theft, police haven't even begun to scratch the surface, he said. "It's such a new game. The losses are enormous."

He said a Vancouver police study estimates theft and inefficiency is pushing up the prices of goods by as much as 15 per cent.

"It's hard to believe but for every dollar spent, 15 cents goes to cover annual shrinkage," Lamb said.

What is suprising, said Lamb, is the apparent lack of concern of businessmen to the problem.

"There is such tremendous apathy," Lamb lamented.

In an effort to stimulate greater attention to the problems, Greater Victoria police and the Chamber of Commerce are holding a crime prevention seminar April 30-May 1 at the Red Lion Inn.

Notices have been sent to area merchants inviting their participation. A registration fee of $10 has been set, up $5 from last year.

Go Sign Given Garden School

A Saanich steering committee has approved a plan to establish a proposed international school of gardening and is considering eight locations.

Committee head Dr. Hugh Keenleyside approved Thursday the formation of six sub-groups to study the locations and prepare a report to the provincial government in May.

One of the sites is at Glanford and Vanalman, an area that has been considered for an industrial zone.

A plan approved by the committee proposes the provincial government be asked for funds to build a two-storey horticultural hall and suggests a western branch of the national arboreteum be established in Saanich.

It also calls for international pavilions on a 30-40 acre site in the municipality and urges a Pacific school of gardening be developed to provide professional training.

The hall would be used to hold international flower shows and other exhibits as well as a meeting place for local gardeners.

Ottawa could then be approached, with support from the provincial government, to establish an aboreteum branch here.

Bill Frost, a reporter for the British Broadcasting Corp., was among the first on the scene at the parking ramp.

"The man's face was completely blackened," Frost said. "His trousers were shredded and he was bleeding profusely from his body. Wreckage from the car was scattered all over the ramp of the car park, and behind the car numerous documents were strewn all over the ground."

Even before the victim was identified, the Labor party government's chief whip, Michael Cocks, informed the Commons of the attack saying: "The whole House will join with me in expressing utmost abhorence of this outrage. We have marked this by suspending our sitting, but the work of Parliament must continue."

The Palace of Westminster, whose hallmark is the Big Ben clock tower, was last hit by a bomb on June 17, 1974, when a 20-pound gelignite device went off in northern end of Westminster Hall, injuring 11 persons and starting a fire that did some damage to the historic building.

A man with an Irish accent telephoned the Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency shortly before that blast and said a bomb would go off at the Houses of Parliament in six minutes, but he failed to give its location.

"There was a flash and a pillar of smoke rose halfway up the tower of Big Ben," one witness said.

For years London has been subjected to intermittent car bombings by Irish Republican Army (IRA) terrorists fighting to end British rule in Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland and unite the province with the mainly Roman Catholic Irish Republic.

Grocery Pay-Offs Detailed

operate his business under regulations similar to those in the United States, where strict laws limit the amount of the discounts supermarkets are allowed to receive and ensure such discounts are justified by savings made on a large scale to a single supermarket, versus smaller deliveries to several stores.

McLean told the hearing that the food industry is just as moral as the legal or journalism trades, but added there is a very small minority of retailers which McLean said would "put pressure which I personally would call immoral" on manufacturers to obtain higher discounts.

He said manufacturers must have strong management and customers loyal to the companies' brands to stand up to demands for higher discounts.

It is naive to say a manufacturer can get along without paying any discounts or listing fees to introduce a new product, McLean said.

He also said discounts given to chains when they buy a large order do not always get passed on to the consumer in lower retail prices.

"Inside monies tend to stick more easily to retailers pockets' than gross margins."

Canadian drivers shouldn't face any major fuel shortages this century but their American cousins could hit an energy dead end, according to a spokesman for Imperial oil.

The prospects for gasoline appear good for a long time to come, said the spokesman for the company, Canada's oldest and largest operator.

"Our least concern is the transportation business," said Don Coghill, on behalf of regional manager of corporate affairs George Wisener.

The way Imperial sees things up to the turn of the century Canadian cars will continue to run on gasoline. Other transport will still burn diesel fuel even though heating oils will be curtailed.

By then public and private transportation in the U.S. will be into rationing and well along the way to using alternative fuel sources.

The difference between Canada and the U.S. is in security of supplies.

Canadian domestic and overseas sources of crude petroleum appear safe for the predictable future, with the added advantage that Canada has vast undeveloped synthetic crude resources plus a large reservoir of natural gas that will steadily replace heating oils.

The less light and heavy oil burned domestically and to generate electrical power, the more diesel-type fuel will be refined.

Coghill said there will be no short-term and slight long-term effect on motive fuel supply because an increasing proportion of crude oil will go into gas and diesel fuel.

Later, as costs for refining synthetics from tar sands and oil shale become more economic, motor-driven transport will have that alternative to draw from.

"Particularly when we are looking at zero growth rate in demand for petroleum products," he said.

He said it is difficult to reconcile this view with the U.S. problem of shrinking supply, especially when substitute gasoline is already being made and sold at two or three cents a gallon more than gasoline in parts of the U.S.

Motorists in Iowa, for example, can buy gasahol, a mixture of gasoline and alcohol derived from corn, a principal crop in that state.

There are many gasoline substitutes, including hydrogen — a very dangerous and difficult to handle fuel — nitromethane, nitrous oxide, hydrogenated coal and combinations of synthetic petroleum byproducts.

Researchers are working constantly on these variations and lately have directed much interest toward recyled waste as renewable sources of fuels.

Imperial conducts its own research or research through its multinational parent, Exxon, and keeps abreast of all developments in the energy field.

The company's Canadian holdings include large soft coal deposits. Coghill said coal gasification, solar heat, wind and tidal energy are all part of the Canadian energy future and although Imperial has no direct research in nuclear energy, it is represented in the industry.

"As an energy company, we are certainly looking at alternative methods of generating power."

Wind power would appear to have some application in the north where winds are more constant and the population to be served is not large. But it seems impractical in the heavily-populated south.

"This sort of thing is very impractical in transportation," Coghill added.

The future may bring electric cars somewhere down the road but meanwhile there will be a greater proportion of lighter, smaller cars with conventional, much more efficient gasoline and diesel engines.

He said costs are an obstacle to marketing alternative motor fuels at present.

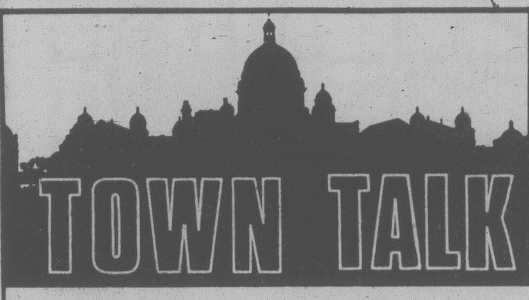
Methanol, for instance, costs about twice as much as gasoline made from synthetic petroleum and is not therefore at present a feasible alternative.

Dr. Walter Cretney, a hydrocarbon chemist at the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay, said nitromethane is a liquid often used as a solvent.

As a fuel, it might cost more than ethyl alcohol, comprising up to 50 per cent of gasahol.

Nitrous oxide, laughing gas, is sometimes an additive in auto racing fuel and was used during the Second World War with aviation gas to give combat aircraft short bursts of extra power. It is relatively inexpensive.

Cretney said scientists are awaiting the forthcoming development on University of B.C. campus of a 15,000-square foot coal research and teaching centre for engineering and geology.



He was a fixture at Government House, was Gar Dixon.

He served as secretary to more lieutenant-governors than you can shake a stick at and what he didn't know about protocol and procedure wasn't worth knowing.

Well today, Gar called his long career quits and headed into retirement.

Stories about him are legion (if you ever get the chance, just ask the Queen who the best dancer is in B.C.) but the best Dixon story of all happened Wednesday when the current occupant of Government House honored some Boy Scouts.

Gar was up on a small dais outlining to the lads just what would happen during the ceremony and turned to introduce Lieut.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving.

But Gar ran into one of those total mental blocks where the most familiar name — it could be your mother's — just won't come.

For what seemed like almost 30 seconds, Gar hummed, hawed, shook his head and was only taken off the hook when the lieutenant-governor stepped forward, and almost kindly, said not to worry, Gar, he quite understood, there had been so many lieutenant-governors . . .

B.C. Telephone Co. has admitted recording parts of phone conversations between operators and customers in Nanaimo but says the whole thing was an error in judgment.

Company spokesman Don Patterson said the tapes were made as an aid for new operators and were used only for training purposes.

Patterson said the matter came to the attention of upper echelon management when a subscriber wrote letters to newspapers complaining of invasion of privacy. The customer said he was taped without his consent or by a court order.

Some operators and supervisors were aware of what was being done, Patterson said, but the people involved were not aware it was wrong.

Whatever happened to statesman-like politicians?

Anyone who turned on the telly the other night to watch the four Western premiers bumping bottoms with a bevy of dance hall girls during their annual conference in Prince George may well wonder.

A banquet for the premiers and 800 guests Monday night featured entertainment by the Barkerville Revue, a variety show based on the gold rush days of the 1850s.

Premiers Peter Lougheed of Alberta, Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan, Sterling Lyon of Manitoba and our very own Bill Bennett bumped behinds with the dance-hall molls in a cheeky 19th-century number called the bumps-a-daisy.

Harmless, granted, but would Winston have done it?

It seems Camosun College student don't believe in solidarity: Nominations have been open three weeks and still no candidates have appeared for either president or any other executive office.

Current student society president Ron Debeck in a letter to the disinterested student population says the organization is facing a crisis.

If nominations aren't received by the March 31 deadline the society won't survive, he says in the letter, which has a nomination form printed on the back.

Stables Knocks Flip-Flopping Over Planning

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Planning in Greater Victoria School District has "flopped around" over the last six years while administrators struggle to second-guess the school board, superintendent Allan Stables has told the board's planning committee.

Trustees' reluctance to take a stand on school closures and other planning issues is handicapping planners, Stables said.

Three elementary and one high school in the district could be closed right now, he said. He didn't name them.

Stables and administrative assistant Evan Oakley are preparing a comprehensive report of all school facilities.

The report, which applies various class sizes to existing space, will be submitted to the planning committee April 11.

He said the major problem facing the administration is lack of direction from the board.

And since the board has no planning policies, administration assumes it is carrying out the board's wishes.

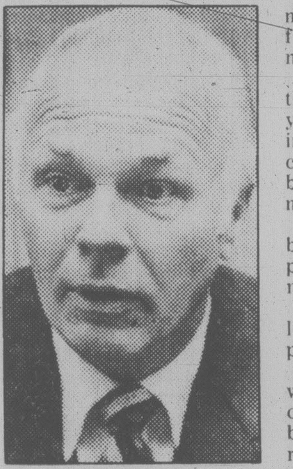
Administrative interpretations of the board's wishes have never been clarified.

"Administration has collected all sorts of data but that isn't planning," Stables said.

Clear-cut policies must be developed on school capacities, class size, boundaries and busing, Stables said.

He said Victoria has always followed a neighborhood school concept and has not been in favor of busing students to other less crowded schools.

District planner Evan Oakley said closure has always been contrary to the trend of the district and any move in that direction bound to be unpopular. That's where the board faces its greatest difficulty.



STABLES
. . . direction needed

But busing takes place in other districts and there is no reason it can't here, Oakley said.

Trustee Mark Fisher said he favored open boundaries and suggested students be given bus passes and allowed to the school of their choice on a first-come-first-served basis.

A lengthy motion by Fisher to develop specific policies to back up capital project requests to the ministry of education was broken into two parts.

The first part, to undertake district planning and set up school boundaries, was retained by the planning committee.

The second part of the motion, to get architectural and professional appraisals of all proposed building projects and to separate the capital from the maintenance requests, was referred to the finance committee.

Fisher said his motion was the culmination of several years of frustration watching the ministry turn down capital projects because the board didn't have its planning policy clearly defined.

Stables said changing boundaries is the greatest political move the board can make.

Boundaries have changed little over the years because parents get upset.

Fisher said the district will eventually be forced to close some schools. The board should concentrate on renovating its best buildings rather than patching up every school in the district.

The district has $100 million invested in facilities and most of them are "junk," he said.

Administrators making between $30,000 and $40,000 a year spend most of their time sticking pins into a board trying to chart the shifting student populations.

They play the game of moving portables around the district to cater to the population expansions and contractions.

"It's costly to ship those crummy classrooms around," Fisher said. "We can't do this pin-on-the-wall routine any more."

Q. Can you tell me how to convert kilopascals to millibars — pressure units used in meteorology? W.W.

A. When converting kilopascals to millibars move the decimal point one unit to the right. Example: 101.26 kilopascals = 1012.6 millibars.

Groves Ready to Run After Grieve Drops Out

The president of the NDP's Esquimalt-Saanich Constituency Association has offered to replace federal election candidate Paul Grieve who resigned for personal business reasons.

Jack Groves, 59, a vice-president of the Victoria Labor Council and an executive member of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America, said he will seek the nomination at a meeting April 9 at St. Christopher's Church Hall at Tillicum and Carey. Deadline for nominations is noon April 6.

Grieve was nominated almost a year ago at a time when an election call appeared imminent.

His construction company now requires his full attention after suffering financial difficulties and Grieve said he does not want to embarrass the party because of his situation.

A spokesman for the provincial NDP headquarters in Vancouver said if the election had been set a month earlier or a month later than the May 22 date, it would have suited Grieve.

"But it came at an awkward time for him."

The federal riding executive will consider the question of new candidates for the nomination, he said.

Earlier, a controversy arose in the NDP Esquimalt-Port Renfrew provincial riding association when Frank Mitchell won the nomination by one vote over John Brewin, whose supporters want a new nomination convention.

Larry Mann, an Esquimalt alderman, said the nominating chairman Bill Doneley erred when he cast the deciding vote in Mitchell's favor, that a tie vote meant no election and the candidates were entitled to a new election.

The subject will be dealt with by the party's provincial executive in Powell River at the weekend.

SOCIAL WORKERS HANDED THE JOB

Ombudsman Service for VGH

Social workers at Victoria General Hospital will provide an ombudsman service for a six-month trial period, hospital directors decided Thursday.

Dr. Michael Ashwood-Smith said today the existing patient and family counselling service operated by five or six qualified social workers will handle patient complaints and also investigate the quality of hospital care.

The service will handle complaints that might not ordinarily receive attention.

Monthly reports will be submitted to the hospital board's quality assurance committee, headed by Ashwood-Smith. At the end of six months the program will be evaluated.

Appointment of a full-time ombudsman will be discussed in six months if the experimental service uncovers a lot of complaints.

The board has no idea how many grievances the service will handle or how much it will cost, but the necessary funds have been guaranteed, Ashwood-Smith said.

Every patient entering the hospital will be informed of the service.

The counselling service will interview randomly-selected patients about the quality of care they are receiving and patients will also be interviewed after they leave hospital.

The board last month decided against appointing an ombudsman to deal with complaints from patients.

Dr. Eugene Kaellis, who proposed the appointment, said the hospital society which elects the board had approved by a substantial margin a resolution calling for the hospital to provide for the position last September.

Personnel committee chairman Carol Pickup said the hospital couldn't afford the position, which would require a $25,000 salary.

Recently-appointed provincial ombudsman Karl Friedmann will also be responsible for hospital care, she noted.

Pickup said there have been few complaints about hospital care.

But Kaellis said in 1972 more than 150 North American hospitals had ombudsmen and many more have been hired since then.

Quebecair Crash Death Toll 18

QUEBEC (CP) — A total of 18 people died in the crash of a Quebecair F-27 turboprop airliner which slammed into a hillside after an engine burst into flames upon takeoff Thursday night, a company spokesman said today.

Jean-Luc Vachon said all the bodies, including those of the pilot and co-pilot, a stewardess and 15 passengers, had been recovered from the wreckage by midday. Six other passengers were in hospital, but none was in critical condition, Vachon said.

He said all 24 persons aboard the plane now have been accounted for.

Jean-Louis Bibeau, a spokesman for the federal transport department in Quebec City, said the accident occurred when the right engine of the twin-engine craft burst into flames just after takeoff. The control tower asked pilot Andre Bessette to make an emergency landing, but the plane crashed and exploded between 3,000 and 4,000 feet from the runway.

"The air controllers told me they received no response from the pilot when they asked him to land," Bibeau said. "He must have had other things on his mind.

"The plane crashed about two or three minutes after it took off. The whole incident happened extremely rapidly."

"In this phase of the investigation nothing is touched," Bibeau said. "They are looking at the pieces and taking photographs of everything at the scene."

The bodies of pilot Bessette, co-pilot Alain Willaume were found in the wreckage which was broken into three main parts.

Workers retrieved the trapped bodies today along with the crucial "black box" that records vital flight information. Police said the flight recorder has been located and is still intact.

Quebecair vice-president Derek Crossen told a news conference early today that the pilot of Flight 255, bound for Montreal, told the airport control tower shortly after take-off he had trouble with the right engine of the two-engine craft.

The plane turned in preparation for an emergency landing, but didn't make it back to the airport.

Police estimated about 10,000 spectators flooded the crash site, making the job difficult for rescue workers and investigators.

The tail section of the 21-year-old Fairchild F-27 was separated from the rest of the fuselage, while seats, baggage, oxygen tanks and other debris lay scattered over the hillside.

In the morning sun, the wreckage of the plane could be seen, with the tail section and its Quebecair markings broken off. The rear section of the fuselage was flipped over on its back but remained intact, while the front portion and the wings were a charred hulk following the fire which broke out when the plane crashed.

Cross-Ownership Probed by CRTC

Cross-ownership of radio, cablevision, TV and newspapers will be reviewed by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission May 15 at a Hull hearing.

Since its establishment in 1968 the CRTC has developed a policy opposing control of more than one medium by a single owner, except in special circumstances.

At the Hull hearing, however, the CRTC will consider whether it should alter its position on cross-owership.

The commission invites comment from interested parties on the circumstances and degree to which cross-ownership might be permitted.

The CRTC is concerned about monopoly, domination of a local area, discrimination, conflict of interest, diversion of financial and human resources.

Archbould, Bibby Claim Top Awards

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Nancy Archbould, a fifth-year physical education major, won the President's Cup for outstanding athletic and scholastic achievement among female athletes.

A fullback on the Vikettes field hockey team, she captained the squad for four seasons and this year was selected to the Vancouver Island all-stars and named the Island's outstanding player.

Winner of the President's Cup for male athletes was gymnast Dave Bibby, a fourth-year arts and science major and member of the Canadian junior men's team. Bibby was the top point scorer in this year's Canada West University Athletic Association meet and was a heavy favorite for a Canadian intercollegiate title before an injury sidelined him.

Two athletes shared in a third major award, the Robert T. Wallace Shield which goes to the outstanding rookie on a varsity team.

The co-winners were Dave Shokar of the volleyball Vikings and Viking basketball forward Gerald Kazanowski. Both are 18 and first-year arts and science students.

Shokar, a graduate of Spectrum School, this year became the first Viking chosen to the Canada West first-team all-stars after selection as the most valuable player in the B.C. high school championshops last year. He's a member of the Canadian junior team and is a prime candidate for the national senior squad.

Kazanowski, one of three brothers enrolling at UVic last fall from Nanaimo, led all CWUAA rookies in scoring for the champion Vikings and was UVic's leading rebounder over the last half of the season. Selected as B.C.'s high school athlete of the year last year, Kazanowski also played for the national junior team and was a first-stringer all season for the Vikings.

Bill Hallam, a fourth-year arts and science major who was slated to serve as varsity men's rowing captain this year until sidelined by a knee injury, was the winner of the Martlet Award for outstanding service, participation and administration in athletics.

He received his award from chancellor Ian McTaggart-Cowan.

The outstanding manager award, which goes to the manager making the most significant contribution to a team, was presented to Chris Marshall of the women's volleyball team by Judy Moore of the athletic department.

Special awards by the Viking basketball team went to guard Robbie Parris as the most valuable player, forward Ted Anderson as the top defensive player and guard Ian Hyde-Lay as the most inspirational player.

Men's basketball: Ted Anderson, Chris Hebb, Ian Hyde-Lay, Mickey Welder, Robbie Parris.

Women's basketball: Janice Turner, Patti Pesklevits, Brenda Smith.

Women's field hockey: Lynne Beecroft, Nancy Archbould, Susan Oliver, Glenda Scott, Bev Gait, Carrie Crookshank, Jan Crook, Mary Cavin.

Gymnastics: Dave Bibby.

Rowing: John Hammond, Peter Lavalee.

Rugby: Dave Chambers.

Men's soccer: Dan Lomas, Dave Secco, John Leier, Les Malbon, Jim Palm.

Men's volleyball: Mark Byra, Gary Maitland.

Women's volleyball: Denise Montgomery, Doris Kuehn.

Lumber In Semi-Finals

EDMONTON — Victoria Home Lumber topped its division with a 3-0 record after posting two victories Thursday in the Canadian women's basketball championship.

The British Columbia champions completed play in the round-robin segment of the tournament with a 93-66 decision over Ottawa Rookies of Ontario after whipping Manitoba 84-56 earlier in the day.

Saskatchewan also finished with an unbeaten record to top the other division and gain the semi-finals with Victoria. Home Lumber was scheduled to face Nova Scotia and Saskatchewan's Saskatoon entry plays New Brunswick.

The final is scheduled for Saturday.

Saskatchewan topped the "A" side with four wins and no losses, followed by Nova Scotia 3-1, Quebec 2-2, Alberta 1-3 and Newfoundland, 0-4. Home Lumber was followed in the smaller "B" division by New Brunswick 2-1, Ontario 1-2 and Manitoba, 0-3.

Angie Dobie of Nanaimo, a former Home Lumber player who now plays for Vancouver Critters but was picked up for the national tourney with three other Vancouver-area players, set the pace for Victoria in the final game with 19 points while Marg Mainwaring had 14. Laura Gillespie scored 25 for Ontario with Sue Vertelhausen adding 12.

Bev Bland led against Manitoba with 21 points while Leslie Godfrey netted 15. Manitoba's Joanne Weir scored 15 points.

In other games, Saskatchewan downed St. John's, Nfld., 81-49, then beat Nova Scotia 85-67; New Brunswick topped Ontario 71-64; Quebec beat Newfoundland 98-50 and Alberta 81-68; Nova Scotia defeated Alberta 68-54; and New Brunswick took Manitoba, 73-66.

Chicago Ends 'Good Things' For Islanders

By Canadian Press

All good things must come to an end — as New York Islanders know only too well following Thursday night's game in Chicago with the Black Hawks.

The Islanders came to the Windy City sporting a 10-game unbeaten streak and holding down a share of the over-all lead in the National Hockey League. They left with neither.

The Hawks struck for four second-period goals — two by Grant Mulvey who scored again in the third period — to derail the high-flying Islanders, 6-1. That, combined with Montreal's 5-2 home-ice win over St. Louis Blues, moved the Canadiens two points ahead of the New Yorkers in the over-all standings. The Islanders, however, hold a game in hand.

"Our minds must have been somewhere else," said Islanders coach Al Arbour. "I don't know what happened to us, but we were unbelievably bad. We let the Hawks beat us every opportunity.

"It certainly was puzzling, notwithstanding the fact that we had been unbeaten in our last 10 games. But to have such a letdown when we know that we have to get ahead of Montreal for the home-ice advantage (for the deciding game of any playoff series) and put on a performance like that defies the imagination."

Chicago also carried a streak — albeit a modest one — into the contest. The Hawks had a win and a pair of ties in their previous three starts and the win Thursday clinched them their second successive Smythe Division title.

Elsewhere, Philadelphia Flyers blanked Vancouver Canucks 5-0 and Boston Bruins dumped Minnesota North Stars, 7-4.

With the Islanders' streak now a thing of the past, Buffalo Sabres and Pittsburgh Penguins become the hottest commodities in the NHL and, ironically, both see their next action against the two front-runners.

The Penguins, unbeaten in their last 10 games — including six victories — are in Montreal on Saturday night, while the Sabres, boasting six straight wins, play the same night in Uniondale, N.Y., against the Islanders.

The Islanders averted a shutout early in the final period when Mike Bossy deflected in a shot by Stefan Persson. It was Bossy's 61st goal of the year and tied the NHL record for most goals by a right winger held by Philadelphia's Reggie Leach.

Despite the loss to Philadelphia, Vancouver clinched second place and a playoff spot in the Smythe Division. St. Louis, which held a slim chance of catching the Canucks, were officially eliminated from post-game activity with its loss to Montreal.

Now Jansch On Sidelines For Cougars

BOB JANSCH
. . . charley-horse

Injuries continue to plague Victoria Cougars as they get ready to face Portland Winter Hawks in a Western Hockey League playoff game Saturday at Memorial Arena.

Game time is 8:30 p.m.

Bob Jansch is the latest Cougar player to hit the injured list and it's doubtful if the rightwinger will be able to start Saturday as the Western Division playoffs continue.

Jansch, who scored three goals in the round-robin opener against New Westminster Bruins last Tuesday, suffered a charley-horse Wednesday while Cougars were playing in Portland.

But there is a chance defenceman Tony Feltrin, who has been out of action since Feb. 10 with a broken bone in his left wrist, might play this weekend.

Feltrin had the cast removed earlier this week and is expected to practice today with the wrist strapped up. If he is able to hold his stick, coach coach Jack Shupe expects Feltrin may be in the lineup Saturday.

Cougars are 1-1 in the eight-game elimination series to determine the division finalists, topping the Bruins 7-4 and dropping a 6-3 decision to Winter Hawks.

Winter Hawks and Bruins meet tonight at Queen's Park Arena for the first time since the infamous brawl which produced eight New Westminster player suspensions and left coach Ernie McLean sitting on the sidelines for the remainder of the season.

Meanwhile, Brandon Wheat Kings shut out Edmonton Oil Kings 4-0 Thursday night in an Eastern Division playoff game and Calgary Wranglers won an overtime frame to defeat Lethbridge Broncos 5-4 in a Central Division playoff.

In Calgary, Ralph Krueger scored at 9:17 of the first 20-minute sudden-death overtime period to give the Wranglers the match.

Sid Giroux, Ray Cote, Sheldon Currie and Kelly Kisio also scored for Calgary, which trailed 2-1 and 3-2 by periods.

Close Call for Stars

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota North Stars' drive for a playoff berth finally caught fire. But they were on an airplane at the time and not on National Hockey League ice.

Sixteen minutes after departure from Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport Wednesday, the airplane captain informed the passengers on Northwest Airlines flight 286 that they would return because of an engine problem.

Fire trucks raced alongside the 727-200 aircraft but the plane was landed smoothly and without problems. When they got off the craft, the Minnesota players learned that the No. 3 engine apparently had caught fire shortly after takeoff. The fire was extinguished in the air.

Several of the players noticed fuel being jettisoned as the plane was being flown back to Minneapolis-St. Paul.

After a delay, the North Stars boarded another aircraft and flew on to Boston for Thursday's game with the Bruins.

Fry Bounces U.S. Rink To Gain Playoff Berth

BERN, Switzerland (CP) — Canada's Barry Fry reached the playoff round at the world men's curling championship today, defeating the United States 8-4 in a playoff for a semi-final berth.

Norway also gained a spot in the playoff round but had to go an extra end before disposing of West Germany 6-5. Saturday's semi-final will set up the championship match later in the day.

Switzerland qualified for the semi-finals earlier in the day by finishing alone atop the 10-country round-robin bonspiel with a 7-2 record following a 6-5 win over Canada, ending the Winnipeg rink's six-game unbeaten string. Canada, Norway, the U.S. and West Germany finished in a tie for second at 6-3, setting up today's playoff round.

The fourth semi-final berth will be decided Saturday morning in a showdown between today's losers.

Fry utilized the same shot-making that propelled his Winnipeg rink to the Canadian title earlier this month to pick up two wins Thursday.

It took a number of games for Fry to return to form. The rink lost its first two matches in the round-robin schedule and, at times, appeared that it would have a difficult time making Saturday playoffs.

But, in Thursday's seventh and eighth rounds at the Allmend Ice Stadium, the Canadians beat the United States 6-4 after rallying to shade Sweden 6-5 to earn a share of first place with Norway and Switzerland.

In other eighth-round games, Switzerland nipped Sweden 7-6 in two extra ends, West Germany beat Denmark 6-5, Scotland took a 7-4 decision over Italy and Norway defeated France 6-1.

Peter Attinger was successful with a last-rock takeout to lead Switzerland past Norway 5-4 in a seventh-round game. The U.S. beat Denmark 8-2, Scotland rallied to defeat West Germany 7-5 and Italy downed France 6-3 in other seventh-round games.

Fry said the second end was the key in Canada's round-robin win over the U.S. The Canadian skip, nicknamed The Snake for his quick release of the rock in the hack, scored three in the second when he made a cold draw to the eight-foot circle.

That gave Canada a 3-1 lead over the Americans, who came back to tie the score 3-3 before allowing Fry to score two in the sixth for the winning points.

"Scott (Baird) had an unfortunate shot, just ticking the guard," Fry said. "If he got by, he probably would have had a perfect shot in the third end. That was a tough break for him and a good for us."

In the fourth end, second Mark Haluptzok of the U.S. banged his right knee on the ice while directing sweeping after firing his first stone. He returned to action after a 10-minute delay with a bandaged knee.

Buckaroos Square Playoffs

Western Homes Buckaroos squared the best-of-seven South Island Big Six Hockey League playoff final 2-2 by tripping Victoria Athletics 7-3 Thursday night at Pearkes Arena.

Win Feature

Road to the Top Tough Because of Televison

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson told Congress Thursday it is difficult for a youngster to make it to the top in boxing today because television is only interested in famous names.

"It's tougher today . . . for a youngster to make it to the top," said Patterson, now a member of the New York State Athletic Commission. "There's not that much competition and television is only interested in well-known fighters.

"And many of the well-known fighters are tied up (with promoters) so that doesn't give the unknown, but maybe better qualified kid, a chance to make a reputation. More boxing clubs are needed to give a kid experience."

Patterson joined John Prenderville, chairman of the New York commission, in supporting legislation designed to create a three-member federal boxing commission in the labor department.

Prenderville read a statement in which the New York body urged, among other things, a standardization of boxing's rules and regulations, computerization of boxers' records, a national rating system and a national standard for medical examinations.

All the recommendations are contained in the bill introduced by Rep. Edward V. Beard, Dem-R.I., chairman of the House labor standards commission, which has been holding public hearings.

AITKEN AND SCOTT FIVEPIN WINNERS

High middle games helped boost Nora Aitken and Jack Scott atop the fivepin division during the 23rd week of competition in the 16th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Nora captured women's laurels with a 192-322-314 — 828 series in the Tuesday Mixed League at Chemainus Bowlarena while Jack collected men's honors with a 335-367-207 — 909 series in the YBC Majors League at Town and Country Lanes.

In addition to earning weekly awards, Nora and Jack also received berths in the season-ending Bowler-of-the-Year fivepin rolloffs at 1 p.m. Apr. 29 at Town and Country.

Johnston Is 'Caps Main Luxury

VANCOUVER (CP) — While Vancouver Whitecaps are enjoying a flood tide of growth in the stands and on the field, they are bucking a North American Soccer League trend to heavy spending on international stars.

The Whitecaps, who matched the 20-6 regular-season record of Soccer Bowl champion New York Cosmos in 1978, will have the same blend of Canadian and English players in the lineup tonight when they open at home against Dallas Tornado.

But just before the season opened, the Whitecaps decided to take a one plunge into expensive recruiting when they signed Scottish international Willie Johnston to a three-year pact.

Johnston, a controversial winger from West Bromwich Albion, was banned from the World Cup in 1978 in Argentina when a drug test proved positive. He maintained he was taking the drugs for an ailment.

Whitecaps coach Tony Waiters said Thursday that no decision had been made on whether Johnston, 32, would start tonight. He arrived Thursday, went through the motions of a workout with the club and a news conference but complained of jet lag.

The Whitecaps have kept silent about terms of Johnston's contract but it has been reported that Vancouver had to pay $200,000 to West Brom of the English First Division in transfer fees.

When the 'Caps, who lost in the National Conference semi-final to Portland Timbers last year, take to Empire Stadium's artificial turf against Dallas tonight, they will be seeking to continue their record of 13 regular-season victories.

And there will be at least five new faces in the lineup as off-season recruiting by the club was aimed at filling the void left by the departures of winger Alan Hinton, who became coach of Tulsa Roughnecks after setting a NASL assist record, loan player Steve Kember and Steve Harrison and Bobby Campbell.

Two of the more prominent new faces are striker Trevor Whymark, purchased from Ipswich Town, and Everton defender Roger Kenyon, both English internationals.

Other newcomers are Ray Lewington, Carl Valentine and Bruce Grobblelaar. Lewington and Valentine are English and Grobbelaar, a South African who was discovered while on trial with West Brom, is the only player on the team who is not from the United Kingdom or Canada.

Heading the Canadian contingent will be midfielder Bobby Lenarduzzi who was named the NASL's player of the year in 1978.

Also returning are NASL all-stars Kevin Hector and defender John Craven.

While success is growing on the field, the club is also moving into a position to challenge Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League and British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League for the sports dollar.

The Canucks are seeing attendance decline and the Lions were outdrawn twice on successive nights last season by the Whitecaps, who now are in their seventh season. Last year they drew a total of 236,046 fans to 15 home games compared with 176,637 in 1977.

Riley Creek Decision A Big Step Backward

Well, it looks like we're back to square one.

The politically-motivated decision by the upper echelons of Federal Fisheries earlier this week to back down over the issue of logging along Riley Creek in the Queen Charlottes has a ripe aroma — to say the least.

When the revisions to the Fisheries Act were passed with unanimous approval by the House of Commons in late 1977, the new protective measures for our salmonid resources were hailed by everyone concerned over the short shift the existing act had been receiving in various court cases.

The revisions added some teeth to the legislation, particularly to the clauses concerning fish habitat.

Unfortunately, our short-sighted provincial government, instead of lending support, proceeded to stonewall the act in federal-provincial meetings before its passage and continued to pick away at every opportunity afterward.

That decision Tuesday to allow logging to resume in the steep-sided and slide-prone valley of Riley Creek, where a federal fisheries ban had been imposed because of unstable soil conditions, is both illogical and unscientific.

The situation became explosive during the previous week when Q.C. Timber Ltd., acting under direction of the provincial Forest Service, started to log the area in defiance of the ban.

Fisheries officers proceeded to press charges against both the loggers and the company under provisions in the Fisheries Act, which still hasn't been tested in court.

The International Woodworkers of America then jumped into the act, threatening a province-wide walkout if charges against the men weren't dropped, and Premier Bennett and Forests Minister Tom Waterland condemned the federal action.

The subsequent compromise decision reached in Vancouver leaves the Fisheries Act open to contempt.

It doesn't make much sense to put teeth into a piece of legislation and then come up with ad hoc decisions which emasculate it — particularly in the face of several reputable studies that conclude slides are highly likely to occur along the important salmon-producing stream.

The fact that a federal election has been called for May 22 might have had a great deal to do with the federal government's decision to back off on the confrontation. Loggers must outnumber fishermen in Iona Campagnolo's home riding.

When I telephoned Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc's office on Thursday, he was unavailable for comment — probably planning his election campaign. A spokesman for his office told me that since some damage had already been done in the area, they figured it would be better to log the remaining trees rather than risk "blowdown."

We, the taxpayers of this province, are paying the shot for both antagonists in this issue and will be left holding the bag one way or another if slides from the denuded hillsides wipe out the salmon resource in that area.

We're paying right now to help repair some of the damage caused our fisheries resource by past logging practices and this writer can't help but wonder if the provincial government's tune might have been a little different if their share of the Salmonid Enhancement Program funding was more than five per cent of the federal contribution.

There's a bitter taste today in the mouths of many Federal Fisheries field personnel as well as within the ranks of the provincial Fish and Wildlife Branch.

The phrase of "sold down the river" is bound to crop up in many conversations for many years to come.

Perhaps it will only die out when we get a more enlightened crew in both levels of government.

Athletics, Wests In 'Rubber' Match

Victoria Athletics and Victoria West, long-time rivals in the first division of the Vancouver Island Soccer League, meet again Saturday in a semi-final of the annual Jackson Cup competition.

Game time is 2:15 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park.

It will be the third meeting this year between the two teams. Athletics won the first encounter 3-0 early in the season and Wests posted a 2-1 victory in the second tussle.

Athletics clinched the first division title last weekend and earned one of two berths for VISL teams in the Province Cup playdowns. The Jackson Cup winner collects the other berth in the nine-team British Columbia championship. If Athletics win the Jackson Cup, the second berth will go to the other finalist.

On Saturday, Athletics will be shorthanded since Dan Hood and Peter Zachary are both playing with the national side in Bermuda. Wests, meanwhile, will welcome the return of John McGuire, who has been sidelined for four weeks with an injury.

Interlocking Plan Suits Viking Coach

University of Victoria Viking coach Ken Shields may be apprehensive about travelling all the way to Lakehead University at Thunder Bay, Ont., but he's pleased with the home games he drew in the partially interlocking basketball schedule between Canada West and Great Plains Athletic Conference schools adopted at a meeting in Calgary this week.

Vikings will host Winnipeg Wesmen and Lakehead Nor'westers, two leading G-Pac schools, in the Pacific Rim invitational tournament at McKinnon Gym in December.

Vikings also will play a pair of road games against two other G-PAC schools, Regina Cougars and Brandon Bobcats, in November.

That means Shields won't have to make the trek to Thunder Bay — at least this year.

None of the games will count in the standings for the six schools in the Canada West circuit. Plans call for UVic, UBC, Lethbridge, Calgary, Alberta and Saskatchewan men's and women's teams to continue playing regular CWUAA schedules of 20 games each in addition to the exhibition games against G-PAC.

UVic Vikettes will play the same four G-PAC schools on the same dates as the Vikings but neither Lakehead nor Winnipeg will play in Victoria next fall. Vikettes will complete their schedule commitment by meeting the Ontario and Manitoba teams in an invitational tournament at UBC while the Vikings host the Pacific Rim tourney here. Vikettes will play at Regina and Brandon, however.

Basketball was the contentious issue at the Calgary meeting, Shields said Thursday. He and athletic and recreation manager Mike Elcock represented UVic at the meeting.

G-PAC at one point threatened to cancel the entire interlocking plan, which included tournament sports and hockey, if CWUAA schools remained cool to the idea of a basketball interlock. The partial schedule represented a compromise, Shields said.

The two conferences will play complete interlocking schedules in hockey, a sport that does not involve UVic. And all championship tournaments will be interlocked, including gymnastics and track and field in which UVic competes.

League schedules in men's and women's field hockey, volleyball and soccer will remain unchanged for Canada West schools, Elcock added.

Challengers Abound But 'Old Tom' Alright

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — From the lofty plateau of his advanced age — 29 — Tom Watson viewed the Professional Golfers' Association tour Thursday.

"At one time, players came on the tour from the caddy ranks and learned to play out here," he said. "Now they're coming out of the colleges and they know how to play when they get here. The competition is much, much greater."

Then, in mock parody, he continued in a different voice: "Oh, yes, Old Tom. Yeah, I remember Old Tom Watson."

Well, Old Tom is still doing just fine, thank you, and he delivered his remarks Thursday after shooting a near-flawless round of six-under-par 65 that staked him to a one-stroke lead in the first round of the $300,000 Heritage Classic.

Watson, winner of the 1977 Masters, two British Opens and the 1977 and 1978 player of the year, hit every fairway, missed one green, didn't come close to making a bogey and played the back side in 31.

Lanny Wadkins, the tour's only two-time winner this year, fired a 66 to finish one shot back. He, too, got around the difficult Harbour Town Golf Links without a bogey and was a single shot in front of George Burns and Jerry Pate.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby shot 71.

Tom Weiskopf was disqualified for playing the wrong ball on the 11th hole. His drive appeared to be out of bounds and he played a provisional ball. The original ball was in bounds, but Weiskopf continued to play the provisional.

Post One Stroke Off Pace

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Chako Higuchi, conquering a water-logged front nine, reeled off three consecutive birdies en route to a two-under-par 69 and a one-stroke lead in Thursday's opening round of a $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Seeking her third victory since joining the tour in 1975, the 5-foot-4 Japanese star found her long-lost putting game. She needed just 30 putts while shooting a 33-36.

Trailing Higuchi by a stroke were Canadian Sandra Post, glamorous Jan Stephenson, tour newcomer Alice Ritzman, Jan Ferraris and Bonnie Bryant.

Play was delayed an hour because of heavy rains earlier in the week that saturated the 6,134-yard, par 36-35 Mesa Verde Country Club layout. Two groups of golfers — none among the low scorers — had to quit because of darkness and will finish their first round Friday.

Luke Easter Slain In Holdup Attempt

EUCLID, Ohio (AP) — Former Cleveland Indians' first baseman Luke Easter, 63, was shot and killed Thursday after being held up by two men outside a bank.

Euclid police said Easter was leaving a trust company branch office after cashing cheques when he was shot.

Easter, who played for the American Baseball League Indians from 1949 to 1954, had been working in Euclid since 1967. Police said his assailants fled in a car but were captured by pursuing police after their car hit an embankment several miles away in Cleveland.

Luscious Easter, who still holds the record for the longest ball ~~hit in~~ Cleveland Stadium — 477 feet, was brought up to the majors by the Indians after he hit 25 home runs in two months for San Diego of the Pacific Coast League. After leaving the Indians, he continued to play for in the minors for many years.

Fifteen years ago, when he gave his age as 52, he was still active with Rochester Red Wings of the International League, where he was a player-coach and pinch hitter.

Birmingham Rookies Locked In

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Free Press says five Birmingham Bulls rookies have signed four-year contracts worth a combined total of $3.4 million with the World Hockey Association club that will cease operations if a proposed expansion of the National Hockey League is approved — as expected — today in New York.

The newspaper says the five 20-year-old players — Rob Ramage, Craig Hartsburg, Pat Riggin, Gaston Gingras and Rick Vaive — and their agent, Bill Watters, agreed to the contracts in Atlanta on Tuesday.

Under the proposed expansion, which will see four WHA cities — Edmonton, Winnipeg, Quebec and Hartford, Conn. — join the NHL for the 1979-80 season, the five players would be available in the NHL's amateur draft, since they were still eligible to play junior hockey this season.

Birmingham, along with Cincinnati Stingers, will go out of business.

The key to the multi-million-dollar deal was the signing of the five players by Bassett, but that it was equally important they sign with a WHA club that will go out of business. With Birmingham out of business, the players will be free for the NHL amateur draft on June 15 because the contracts carry no-trade, no-sell clauses between the Bulls and WHA or NHL teams.

The signings also come in the wake of reports that part of the expansion proposal calls for the NHL to honor all WHA contracts of players they either protect or acquire as a result of expansion.

The signings also are seen as a method through which Bassett may profit from the demise of the Birmingham franchise.

The NHL teams drafting the five junior-age Bulls players will have to pay dearly because the contracts go with them to the NHL, the newspaper quotes Watters as saying.

Ramage and his defence partner, Hartsburg, reportedly would receive $1 million each over the four years of their contracts while the other three players would split the remaining $1.4 million.

Before the Judge

A 26-year-old woman who stole more than $4,000 while employed as a teller at the Saanich Peninsula Savings-Credit Union was jailed for five months Thursday by Judge William Ostler in provincial court.

Deborah Diane Griffin, 2826 Austin, was also given three-month concurrent sentences on nine other false pretence charges from last year.

Ostler noted the woman had severe emotional and domestic problems but also pointed out she held a position of high trust.

He described the theft as a deliberate act, "quickly discovered and the money recovered." However, the severity of the act was not diminished by the last two factors.

Because of the magnitude of the offence and the position of trust, he concluded, a probationary period recommended by a pre-sentence report was unjustifiable and unfair to the public.

The nine counts of false pretences were in connection with worthless cheques passed between July and November of last year.

Donald Allan Hayward, 22, of 801 Esquimalt, who was also in a position of trust with a security firm, was given the maximum $500 fine after pleading guilty to shoplifting where he was employed as a store detective.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court Hayward was employed by a security firm hired by Woolco in the Town and Country shopping centre.

On March 1, Laughton said, Hayward arranged to purchase a table lamp on sale and took the lamp out to his vehicle where he removed the receipt and returned to the store.

Hayward then took another lamp, went to a rear area and attached the receipt to the second lamp, Laughton stated. At the end of the day, Hayward tried to take the lamp out of the store but was stopped and questioned by a store employee and another security guard with the firm.

Hayward said he was "very ashamed" of the incident and told Judge Fred Green he was under financial pressure and lost his job as well as destroying a five-year career in the security industry because of the act.

Green said Hayward stood in more jeopardy than usual because he was placed in a position of trust.

A 37-year-old Victoria woman was given a one-day jail term and ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work for stealing $2.89 worth of cosmetics last Thursday from Shoppers Drug Mart, 1302 Douglas.

Laughton said Helen Charleson, 2667 Blanshard, shoplifted a makeup package shortly after noon and was caught outside the store.

Laughton said Charleson had three previous convictions for theft and had been given suspended sentences on four previous occasions.

Green told the woman he would have given serious consideration for a longer jail sentence had it not been for the fact she was the mother of three teen-aged daughters still living with her.

Green fined 28-year-old Gregory Sam $50 and ordered him to perform 75 hours of community service work for stealing a $108 television set from Woolworth's.

Leanne Berry of The Law Centre, speaking for Sam who pleaded guilty, said liquor was involved and Green said it must have been because the act was so brazenly stupid.

Two teen-agers who siphoned gas were given conditional discharges but ordered to do 75 hours of community service work.

Glen Blaine Schall, 18, of 6611 Oldfield, and Michael Glen Gagnon, 17, of 841 Kindersley, admitted stealing gas from a vehicle at the Butler Bros. gravel pit in Central Saanich.

Land Bid Studied

An offer by a local church group to purchase five acres of Greater Victoria School District property for a retirement home has been referred to the secretary-treasurer for study.

Victoria Christian Retirement Community Society wants to buy part of a parcel of land consisting of three lots on Agnes Street near Glanford Park.

The letter from society secretary Tito Hoogland said most of the members also belong to the Christian Reformed Church on Agnes and want to build a retirement home for the less fortunate across the street.

The single-storey complex would consist of self-contained units, a dining room, kitchen, guest rooms, library hobby shop, sick bay and clubhouse.

$15,015 Granted University For Park Awareness

A $15,015 Parks Canada contract has been awarded to a University of Victoria program designed to expand awareness and appreciation of wilderness parks.

Four students, under UVic's program director Dr. Gerald R. Walter, will conduct the program which will use Pacific Rim National Park as an example.

A Parks Canada spokesman said the program will serve two objectives — increase student employment and spread the message of national park values to residents and visitors.

"We are not pushing attendance at parks and sites but the heritage values those places contain," he said.

He said an additional fund of $69,500 will be distributed to B.C. and Alberta environmental groups to conduct similar projects.

$50,000 to Sooke Man

A 55-year-old Sooke commercial fisherman has been awarded $50,000 in a B.C. Supreme Court decision arising from a 1976 traffic accident on the Old Island Highway in Colwood.

Liability was admitted leaving Mr. Justice Harry McKay to make an award for compensation for Frank Charles Planes against Russell Hooke of Colwood.

The car Planes was driving Nov. 19, 1976, was rear-ended by Hooke while in a lineup of cars at a stop sign. The car was a writeoff and Planes suffered what was described by McKay as a flexion-extension injury to the neck, giving him neck pain and low back pain.

The award broke down to $15,000 loss of earnings attributable to the accident and $15,000 for pain and suffering and loss of enjoyment of life, on which 10½ per cent interest from Nov. 19, 1976, will be paid, plus $20,000 for projected future earnings loss.

What We Eat Could Help Us to Remember

By H.M. SCHMECK JR.

A surprising variant of the proposition that you are what you eat is being explored as a promising strategy for dealing with some forms of memory impairment, which is among the most distressing, difficult and common affliction of old age.

The memory problems experienced by some elderly people probably have less to do with specific diseases of aging than with the combined effects of poor nutrition, loneliness and social deprivation. In other people, the problems are caused by physical brain damage that is beyond repair. But for still others, some help ought to be possible, at least in theory.

The new strategy, involving dietary supplements of a common food substance called choline, is still experimental. No scientist is yet willing to predict how useful it will prove to be; but some see it as representative of an important new realm of brain chemistry worthy of extensive exploration.

Choline is present in large quantity in egg yolks and is also found in meat and fish. Lecithin, a food additive that is being used increasingly as an emulsifier, is also rich in choline, although many commercial sources of the substance contain relatively little of the active ingredient.

"In no sense here are we treating nutritional disease," said Dr. Richard J. Wurtman of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, one of the scientists who made the discovery that opened the way for the new research. "We are simply taking advantage of a curiosity of the brain to treat non-nutritional diseases."

Choline is being used experimentally to treat such diverse conditions as a disabling disease called tardive dyskinesia, manic-depressive illness and a common form of progressive senility called Alzheimer's disease, in which the first abnormal sign is usually impaired memory.

All of the research follows the discovery in 1975 at MIT that choline from food has a prompt effect on the brain's ability to make an important chemical of nerve signal transmission called acetylcholine. There is a large body of scientific evidence linking nerve cells that use acetylcholine to memory formation in humans and animals.

The surprising element in the discovery was that choline passes into the blood from food in the digestive tract, is taken up by the brain directly from the circulating blood and is used almost at once to help the brain make acetylcholine.

This means that the composition of each meal could have a direct effect on the production of chemical signals in the brain.

Researchers considered this surprising because it has long been conventional scientific wisdom that something called the blood-brain barrier protects the brain from such direct influence by things that are excessive or lacking in the day-to-day diet. Only a few substances, notably alcohol and some powerful drugs such as the narcotics, were though to be able to penetrate the barrier.

When choline was found to do so, however, scientists at a variety of institutions began using it in the experimental treatment of several conditions.

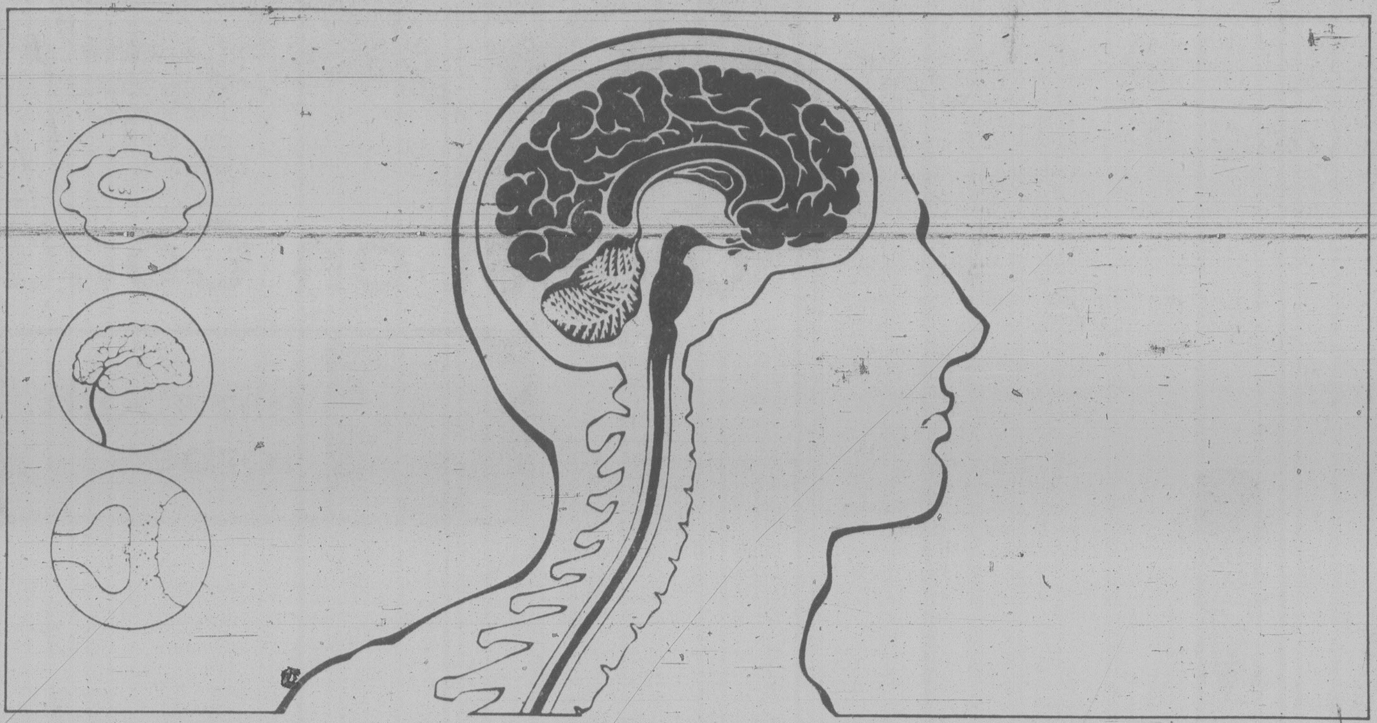
Dr. Janice Christie and colleagues in Edinburgh tried choline supplements recently in Alzheimer's disease patients and reported the treatment may have slowed the characteristically relentless progress of that mind-destroying illness. At the Allan Memorial Institute in Quebec, a team led by Dr. Pierre Etienne also got results suggesting usefulness of this kind of treatment for some similar patients. In both cases the promising effects were produced in persons in an early stage of disease. Choline seemed to be of no help in advanced cases.

Although the name is probably unfamiliar to most people, Alzheimer's disease is by no means uncommon. As many as 15 per cent of people older than 65 have severe memory problems that may stem from it, according to some estimates, and it is believed to be the most common dementia-producing illness in persons older than 45.

The cause of Alzheimer's disease is unknown, and there has been no effective treatment. Its development is insidious, starting usually with memory difficulties. As it progresses over five to 10 years or more, some patients sink into dementia and are unable to care for themselves.

At St. Elizabeths Hospital in Washington, D.C., scientists of the National Institute of Mental Health tried choline on normal volunteers and found evidence that the treatment might improve the memory of normal persons whose short-term memory scores were low. There appeared to be no upgrading of memory ability, however, among persons who were already adept at memorization.

The reports on these experiments were among more than 30 given recently at a three-day symposium on the use of choline and related substances in nerve and mental diseases. The meeting, in Tucson, Ariz., was organized by Wurtman of MIT, Dr. John H. Growdon of Tufts-New England Medical Centre and Dr. Andre Barbeau of Institute de Researches Cliniques de Montreal. They are among the pioneers in the study of choline's relationship to brain chemistry.



CHOLINE IS PRESENT in many foods, notably egg yolks, meat and fish (inset, top left). It is also one of few substances able to penetrate so-called blood-brain barrier (middle inset) directly into the brain. Certain brain cells are stimulated by choline to produce more acetycholine, a substance that transmits nerve impulses (bottom inset).

No-Brand Items Cost May Rise

TORONTO (CP) — Booming sales of bargain-priced, no-frill generic grocery products might result in higher prices, manufacturers say.

The products first appeared on store shelves in Ontario a year ago this week and sales have astounded the supermarkets that introduced them, reaching five per cent of total sales in the case of Loblaws Ltd., one of the first to introduce the products.

David Morley, president of the Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada, said national brands have been subsidizing the cost of generics.

Most manufacturers cover overhead costs in their usual production of national brands and therefore are quite happy to supply generic products at unusually low prices, Morley said.

"That kind of costing's fine if generics are only, say, five per cent of your run," he said.

"But if these things really took off and ate into the national brand sales, taking maybe 30 or 40 per cent of your run, you couldn't afford not to allocate full overhead costs to them.

"If the price goes up, who knows whether people will still want to buy generics?"

There are some signs Morley may be right. The four supermarket chains carrying generics already are having trouble finding suppliers to expand their product lines at prices they think consumers will be willing to pay.

But so far, the stores seem to have had no problem keeping substantial price differences between national brands and generic products already carried.

The research firm of A. C. Nielsen has hailed generics as one of the most significant developments in the grocery business. It has warned national brand manufacturers they face some important decision-making on how to compete.

A number of food industry experts say generics will stay on supermarket shelves for at least one more year and that the range of generic products available will continue to grow.

Loblaws started its no-name line with 16 products a year ago and will have 103 by the end of the month.

Dominion Stores Ltd. has 90 products in its line and is looking for as many more as it can find at a price it thinks consumers will pay.

Miracle Food Mart's line now contains 40 to 45 products, depending on the availability of supplies. Oshawa Group Ltd. has made 25 products available to its Food City stores and IGA franchises.

A and P expects to decide next week whether to introduce a line of generic products.

Canada Safeway Ltd. has refused to go generic as such but has arranged some brand-name products and many of its lower-priced private labels into an inflation-fighter program designed to meet the competition from generics.

PRESSURE NEEDED

The most effective way to control serious bleeding is to apply direct pressure on the wound, using a clean cloth or a bare hand, if necessary.

DEAR ABBY:My wife read the letter from TIRED PARENTS and handed it to me without comment. These parents were tired of supporting their 30 and 25-year-old sons, who were lazy good-for-nothings and "always in some kind of trouble.

What a contrast to our son, who has always been independent and highly motivated. He worked his way through college and has a bachelor's degree and master's from one of the top universities.

We helped him a little his first year; from his sophmore year on he never asked for a cent. He now has a very responsible position with another fine university and a bright future.

You could not find a more thoughful son. He always remembers our birthdays and anniversary. On Mother's Day and Father's Day he always calls and sends a present. Though he is nearly 30, he has never missed a Christmas at home with us. His gifts are always special.

Incidently, our son is a homosexual. We don't understand why he is this way. We were hurt and upset when he told us. But we have never stopped loving him, and we feel it would be ungrateful to complain or pray that things were different. The lord sent us a wonderful son who is "a joy in our old age," and we feel truly blessed.

PROUD PARENTS

DEAR PROUD:And your son is also truly blessed to have such understanding parents.

DEAR ABBY:I would like to donate my eyes and kidneys and any other parts of my body that would be of use to a living person (after I die of course), but I doubt if they would be good enough.

You see, I'm 72 years old, have had a gall-bladder operation, two hart attacks, and put drops in my eyes regularly for glaucoma.

I wonder who would want my eyes? And since the rest of me isn't in very good shape either, would it be worth the trouble to donate any of my parts to that organ bank – you wrote about?

You may print this because I'm sure other people want to know the answer, too.

ALL USED UP

DEAR ALL:Organs that are not suitable for transplants are useful for research and teaching, so please don't hesitate to register with The Living Bank, Box 6725, Houston, Texas 77005.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WILMA": Is this the poem?

"So many gods, so many creeds,
So many paths that wind and wind.
While just the art of being kind
Is all this sad world needs."

Oldest on Continent

When they are together, words like bight, heddle, ratchet and lemns are common usage.

Over the years they have experimented with moose hair, dog hair, fine linens, cottons and light and heavy wools.

Today they have some 283 members, from teenagers up to 80-year-olds, and they own two permanent floor looms, 12 table looms and two spinning wheels, all carefully housed in St. Alban's Church Hall on Ryan Street.

Who am I talking about? You must have guessed.

Its the Victoria Handweavers and Spinners Guild, oldest of its kind in North America, and this month celebrating a 45th anniversary.

According to charter member Ruth Anstey, it was in March, 1934, that 10 women got together and with the backing of the Victoria Women's Institute, formed a weaving class.

Mrs. J.L. White was head of the group. The institute donated six dollars for weaving materials; John Kyle, then director of technical education for the provincial government, loaned five table looms and they were ready for a course of lessons conducted by a man named Eldridge, for which they paid three dollars each.

The name they chose was the Women's Institute Weavers Guild.

Six years later came a change. Membership had risen to 38 and in April, 1940, the guild decided to withdraw from the institute and to work from then on as the Victoria Handweavers Guild.

A standards committee was formed in the very early days to ensure that any article which was displayed or sold through the guild, would be properly woven or spun and finished to a set of standards which was acceptable for normal weaving and laundry specifications, as well as pleasing to the eye.

Materials used were mostly very fine cotton and linen or wools, which the members wove into wearing apparel or household items.

Right from the beginning the guild arranged displays of members work at annual fairs in the Willows Exhibition Women's Building. It also staged exhibitions and sales of work in the YMCA, the Empress Hotel, the Hudson's Bay Douglas Room and in the Crystal Garden.

A workshop for spinners was organized where carding as well was taught.

As membership grew and interests widened the word "spinners" was added to the name of the guild and meeting places were changed many times.

Records show those places included the Union Building, the old YMCA on Blanshard Street, Prince Robert House (remember it?) on Douglas Street south of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, a room with Arbutus Crafts when it was on Vancouver Street, the second floor of the Pemberton-Holmes building on Government Street and the present St. Alban's Church Hall.

"A decade ago, materials were much heavier, bulky wools, flax and thicher cottons," she says.

"The trend was back to nature, as it was in food areas. It took less time to weave and spin those thicker materials and production increased."

Today, there is a greater appreciation for the more delicate look.

" A gradual return is being made to the finer materials, as it is in the fashion world."

Mrs. Rainsford speaks of study groups and workshops that are a part of the guild program today; of a library on weaving and kindred handicrafts that has been in use since 1963 and of volunteer work members do to help promote weaving and spinning in such places as Laurel House, Arbutus Crafts, and Esquimalt, Sidney, Saanich and Oak Bay Silver Threads centres.

She also tells you with much pride how Victoria Handweavers and Spinners Guild organized and sponsored the successful Northwest Exhibition held two years ago at University of Victoria.

Listening to Mrs. Rainsford and to Ruth Anstey you realize that while pioneer days may be over, weaving and spinning for the home and as a hobby, is very much alive today.

Footnote — To mark the 45th anniversary, Victoria Handweavers and Spinners Guild is planning a birthday tea for Saturday afternoon, April 7, in the Oak Bay Beach Hotel lounge.

Among long-time members expected to attend are Mrs. Anstey, now a life member and honorary president of the guild; Hazel Hodson, a past president who joined the guild in 1945 and is now honorary vice-president; Mrs. Sydney Pickles, also a past president, who joined in 1946 and Miss Marjorie Hill, who has been active in the guild for many years.

Bible Names Popular

HAMILTON (CP) — Kindergarten classes are beginning to sound like the roll call for the Last Supper, says an American researcher.

Dr. Catherine Cameron, a professor of social psychology and the family at the University of LaVerne in LaVerne, Calif., says Biblical names have become popular for children born in the last few years.

Names beginning with the letter 'J' — like Jennifer Joshua and Jason, also are popular.

She says names like John and Mary are passe, unless they are changed to Jonathan or Maria.

Dr. Cameron, who attended McMaster University in Hamilton, is planning to release a book on the subject of names with Leslie Alan Dunkling of the BBC.

Consumer Feelings High On Fireproof Materials

Joan Watson

Consumers feel strongly about the fact Canadians have no standards for fire retardancy in home furnishings and mattresses. A recent column brought a strong response.

Here's a sample:

From London, Ont.: "I read with great interest your column on fire retardant furniture. I have never before given this subject much thought, but I shall keep your column handy against the time I buy new furniture.

It is a terrible thing that my fellow-man will build and sell to me a dangerous object, when he is aware of safe alternatives.

Many fatal home fires have occurred very close to us recently, and it is a sad thing to think the victims worked and paid for things which helped to kill them.

I strongly support the earliest possible action by our government to ensure construction of flame retardant home furnishings. We know how, we must see to it now."

"P.S. I hope everyone who reads your column will hold off buying new furniture until national fire safety standards are in force at the retail level."

And from Toronto: "As a life-long member of C.A.C., I am very interested in helping get action to curb the use of fabrics in the home that readily smoulder, give off toxic fumes or blaze up and melt. You know what success C.A.C. has had with children's night clothes with regard to firm standards of non-inflammability.

Put me down as supporting you heartily in any action to gain flame-retardant construction of home furnishings.

Good luck."

And even the manufacturers themselves are getting involved. From Gordon F. Wrigley, Executive Vice-President, Fabricushion Limited; "Your article was extremely interesting and more important is alerting the public as to how terrifying a fire can be.

Our aims have been presentations to the Federal and Provincial governments, Fire Marshalls, hospitals, etc. outlining the merits of using fire retardant materials as an interliner in mattresses and chair cushions.

In the 12 months we have been involved with this product I feel we are making progress. Both Manitoba and Vancouver, for example, are looking seriously at specifying safer materials in hospitals and certain institutions."

If you feel strongly on this subject, we're still collecting letters to forward to the Federal government for action.

All correspondence to Joan Watson should be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Term 'Heart Failure' Often Misunderstood

your health

By L. L. Coleman, MD

Readers ask if heart failure is the same as a heart attack. It seems that the term "heart failure" is misunderstood and confusing. Perhaps a simple illustration will help clarify it.

The heart is one of the most powerful muscles in the body. In a remarkable fashion, it continues to pump at regular intervals. Its function is to send blood, oxygen and nourishment to all the organs of the body.

Let us assune that one ounce of blood is pushed out of the heart with each beat and that this happens regulary 80 times a minute. In good health, when there is no obstruction anywhere along the entire circulatory system, the heart continues to do its job efficiently.

Now let us further assume that some obstruction to the free flow of blood occurs because of disease in the lungs, the liver of other organs, or because of narrowing of the blood vessels due to arteriosclerosis. There now is a back pressure on the heart and it must increase its rate of pumping in order to push out that same one ounce of blood with each beat. The heart may increase its beating to as many as 120 times a minute. The work burden placed on this heart muscle is severe. If the obstruction continues, or if the heart muscle is damaged by its own inadequate blood supply, it begins to fail. When the heart muscle continues to become weakened and cammot pump out enough blood during body activity, or while at rest, it becomes severely fatigued, cannot perform its duty and fails. This is heart failure.

To repeat, heart failure is the inability of the heart to carry out its ordinary pumping obligations. The result is incapacitation. Various degrees of activity must be modified, to reduce the pressure on the heart.

There are many drugs, such as digitalis, which give added support to the heart until it can once again assume its normal function.

A "heart attack" usually refers to some problem that interferes with the blood supply to the heart muscle itself. The coronary arteries which surround the heart normally bring to it life-sustaining blood and oxygen. When not enough blood and oxygen flow through these coronary arteries, a portion of the heart muscle becomes defective. Then a "heart attack" may follow. It must be recognized that a heart attack itself may lead to heart failure.

So, the distinction between a heart attack and heart failure becomes a technical one, the severity of which can be determined only by the many tests that are now available.

Freeze milk you know will taste old before you can use it; if it separates when thawed you can still use it for cooking. Freeze blobs of whipped cream in a pie tin then put in moisture-proof container and back in the freezer.

Butter can be frozen, but unsalted butter is likely to change flavor because salt acts as a preservative.

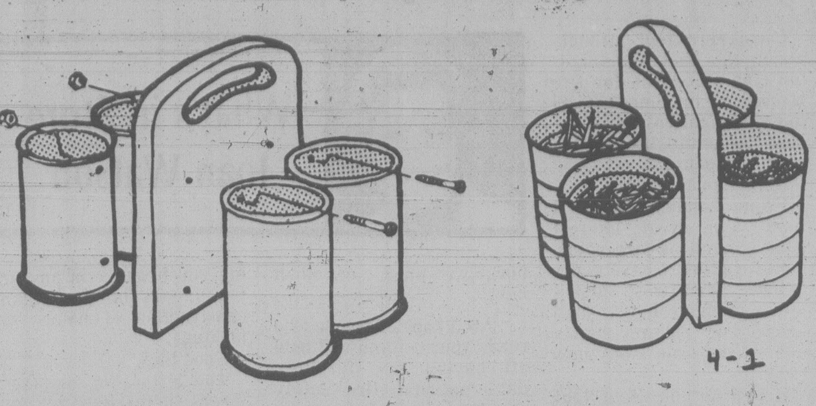
Tin Can Toter Easy to Make, Handy

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS
...it tells you how

What has four cans, a handle and goes anywhere? "Odds and ends" carrier, that's what. Do you have some shingles to tack down on the roof, a piece of molding that won't stay in place, or even a machine that needs adjusting before it will start? Well, the tin can toter can help you with all these chores, plus many more.

And you can make one in about 15 minutes from almost any four recycled metal containers (the size of the cans isn't critical, as long as they're at least 5 inches tall and more than 4 inches in diameter), a slab of wood which measures about ¾ inch by 7 inches by 9 inches, and four 1-inch-long 10/32 machine screws with nuts.

Use a hole saw to drill two 1¼-inch holes 5 inches apart and 1½ inches down from the "top" (one of the 7-inch edges) of the board. Next measure 3 inches down from the center of the 1¼-inch holes and drill a pair of 13/64-inch holes side by side and also spaced 5 inches apart. Another set of 13/64-inch holes, again 5 inches apart, then are drilled through the piece of wood 4 inches below the first pair.



Carefully trim out the curved section of wood between the two 1¼-inches holes with a coping saw, round off the corners of the "handle," sand the whole board smooth and give the wood a coat or two of polyurethane or a paint of your choice.

Finally, remove one end of each can (if the ends haven't already been taken off), drill two 13/64-inch holes in the side of each container to match the holes you've already cut in the wooden handle, and fasten the containers — one pair at a time — to the board with the machine screws and nuts.

You've got it. A simple, low-cost toter that will keep supplies of four different-sized nails, screws, bolts or what-have-you at your fingertips, no matter where a shop project might take you.

And if you seal those bolt attachment holes with a silicone sealant, you can carry up to four different colors at one time. This can be very handy when you want to make just one trip up on the roof to trim out shingles, fascia boards, an antenna and the waterproofing around the chimney all at the same time.

Pamphlet Free for the Asking

Playing is important for every child. It can be incorporated in daily experiences such as feeding, dressing, housework and shopping.

The four-page pamphlet How Does A Toaster Work stresses that children learn through play. It is a child's way of exploring his surroundings and learning new skills.

Parents can do more than provide playthings. They can play with their child. However, be sure to let the child take the lead so that he can build up his self-confidence. Every child also needs playmates of his own age. By playing with peers, he can discover his own strengths and weaknesses.

Many young children like to play school. Their ideas of what school must be like result from reports from their older sisters or brothers. Parents can improve this image by explaining that school is something to look forward to, a place to make new friends and learn exciting new things. Once your youngster goes to school, encourage him to bring his friends home. This gives you the opportunity to see with whom he associates.

With your request please enclose a long (No. 10) self-addressed, stamped envelope and send it to: Canadian Mental Health Association, 2160 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ont. M4S 2Z3.

Many Women Still Believe

NEW YORK (AP) — Many women still believe that a woman's proper place is in the home and that modern-day feminists have disrupted everything, says social historian Sheila Rothman. Mrs. Rothman, a research associate of the Centre for Policy Research in New York City, says that the women's movement should be making more attempts to reach older women instead of just their daughters.

This Theft Takes the Crust

NEW YORK (AP) — Someone is going to have to come up with at least 45,000 pounds of pizza dough, gallons of sauce and tons of pepperoni, sausage, peppers or other extras to use up 40,000 pounds of mozzarella cheese.

The cheese was brought to the city from Rando Cheese Co. in Wisconsin on a tractor-trailer rig driven by Scott Kowalski.

He stopped off at Morgan's Old New York Grill on Manhattan's lower West Side to rest up from the long drive, but when he went back to the truck four hours later, the 18-wheeler, with 700 cases of cheese valued at $250,000, was gone.

Now someone has the problem of figuring out what to do with what they found in the back of the truck.

"We put about 14 ounces of cheese in a big pie," said Ricardo Gimenez, who runs a pizza parlor on Manhattan's East Side.

Using Gimenez's recipe of 14 ounces of cheese and about 16 ounces of dough for each pie, the stolen cheese would yield 45,714 medium pies, with an extra two slices from an eight-slice pizza. If you only put on 12 ounces, you could stretch that to 53,333 pies, with two to three slices left over.

On top of that, Gimenez figures he puts about 10 ounces of sausage, pepperoni or whatever on each pizza. With the pizza with 12 ounces of cheese, that works out to 533,333 ounces, or 33,333.3 pounds of spicy sausage.

Tornado Rakes Town

BRADDYVILLE, Iowa (AP) — A tornado swept through this farming village near Missouri Thursday evening, levelling at least half the town and sent four persons to hospital, authorities said.

The twister struck about 6 p.m., knocking down homes, businesses and a closed elementary school.

Police Sgt. Jim Hein said "50 to 60 per cent" of the village was destroyed by the tornado. Further details of damage are not immediately available.

CAGED-IN SMOKER is Murray Abugov who is taking part in a University of Toronto study to monitor the effects of tobacco on his lungs and body. Abugov and other volunteers are paid $3.60 an hour for their puffing...they also get cigarettes for free.

Taser Reaches The End Of Road

NEW YORK (AP) — The Taser, the type of futuristic weapon called for by law-enforcement authorities as crime began to grow rapidly in the 1960s, may be headed for its last year of production.

It shoots two hooked prongs — attached to wires five metres long, its effective range — into a person's clothing. Then a 50,000-volt charge, enough to paralyse temporarily, jumps through the wire.

Taser sales have been hobbled by federal confusion over how it should be classified, by concern over criminal use of the weapon, and by a public not yet willing to trade its trusty handguns for a more space-aged weapon.

About 20 documented crimes have been committed with the Taser. Four years ago, a person armed with a Taser robbed a Miami service station. In another incident, a couple in Blue Bell, Pa., were tortured with Tasers in their home by four robbers.

U.S. Puts Teeth In Price Curbs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's voluntary anti-inflation program has suddenly become less voluntary.

The administration Thursday announced a series of substantial changes on the price side of its six-month old wage-price guidelines.

Basically, the changes would make it more difficult for firms to raise their prices, and would require companies to submit additional price change data to the government more frequently.

If they refuse, the administration is prepared to use the subpoena power granted by Congress. The subpoenas, if served, would be enforced by the federal courts.

"The council is prepared to use its subpoena power, if necessary, to obtain this information," said Barry Bosworth, the administration's second-ranking inflation monitor.

When asked if the tougher guidelines made the program no longer voluntary, Bosworth smiled: "There are degrees of volunteerism."

The actions were taken with Carter's approval.

Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, said the council found that about half of 175 firms contacted by the government for price information either "professed ignorance" of the voluntary program or were not keeping up-to-date information on price changes.

Between 30 and 40 of them have been asked for additional information.

The changes fall into two categories: expanded monitoring of companies and a tightening of the so-called "profit-margin" exemption.

On the monitoring side:

—The number of government personnel monitoring the price increases will be expanded to include other agencies. For instance, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare will assume responsibility for hospital costs and medical fees. The Agriculture Department will check food prices.

—The council will request "detailed data" from companies in industries "where inflation has been most severe." The five selected so far include: dairy products, prescription drugs, electronic motors and generators, cement and lead.

The changes in the profit-margin test would cut back on the number of firms allowed to choose that alternative.

If a firm is allowed to utilize the profit-margin alternative, the exception would be accompanied by a "restriction on the company's price hikes," and those firms would have to submit profit and price reports each quarter instead of once at year's end.

Accident Rate Alarms S. Korea

SEOUL (AP) — There are only 385,000 cars among South Korea's 35 million residents, but last year there were 65,177 accidents in which 5,112 persons were killed and 91,464 injured, the government reported.

The transport ministry said this 17 per cent accident ratio may be one of the worst in the world.

Ayatollah's Wishes Go To the People

TEHRAN (AP) — Millions of Iranians began voting today on Ayatollah Khomeini's proposal to abolish the 2,500-year-old monarchy and make their country an Islamic republic. Overwhelming approval was expected despite tribal rebellions and middle-class opposition.

Government officials predicted about 12 million of the 18.7 million Iranians eligible to vote will go to the 80,000 polling places today and Saturday. They said anything less than 80-per-cent approval would disappoint the Shiite Moslem leader of the year-long revolution that drove Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from the country Jan. 16.

"I voted for an Islamic republic because it was the only way to stop the corruption of the past regime," a young man in a wheelchair said after dropping his green "Yes" ballot in a box at Tehran University.

"We have given our blood for this day," said a guerrilla who brought his automatic rifle to the polling station with him. "We have waited years for this."

First results are expected Sunday.

Some of the women voters wore Western-style clothing to show their disapproval of Khomeini's call for the traditional floor-length black veil, the chador. Many in the westernized middle class were apprehensive about voting for a concept they felt was too vaguely defined. But there as no visible evidence of a campaign for "No" votes.

Instead, ethnic and religious minorities fearful because the revolutiion is dominated by Shiite Moslem religious leaders, called for a boycott of the referendum. Their spokesmen said Khomeini and his Shiites are "jamming an Islamic republic down our throats."

Turkoman tribesmen of the Sunni Moslem sect rebelled in the northeastern city of Gonbad-e-Qabous on Monday, and Khomeini's negotiators were still trying to end the fighting on Thursday.

Disorders also were reported in the northwestern Azerbaijan city of Ardabil and the eastern Baluchi city of Zahedan.

Kurdish rebels battled government forces in western Iran for four days last week, winning the appointment of a Kurd as provincial governor and a promise of limited autonomy.

"Either Islam will succeed, or infidelity," Khomeini said in radio address Thursday. " 'Yes' means Islam. 'No' means going back to the previous conditions."

Even Grandfathers In Rhodesia Call-Up

SALISBURY (UPI) — A brief front-page newspaper notice prohibiting all able-bodied white men from leaving Rhodesia for a month set the stage.

Registered letters to almost every white home in the country followed.

The terse letters told all sons, fathers and, in some cases, grandfathers to report April 14 for 10 days of duty in the army or police.

The only exemptions were the infirm and men considered so vital to the economy that their wives could not work in their place.

The brief but total mobilization was ordered in the face of threats by black guerrillas to turn the April 20 parliamentary election into a bloodbath.

This first ever one-man one-vote election in Rhodesia will effectively give the black majority political power over the 230,000 whites for the first time since the late 19th century.

To ensure it takes place, the government plans to blanket the guerrilla-infested countryside with armed men.

When the men start reporting, officials estimated that overnight Rhodesia's army and polce forces will swell from 19,000 men to more than 50,000.

Mike Daffy of the draft exemption board said the response to the call to arms has surpassed official expectations.

"We are asking them to sacrifice 6½ working days for a future and the Rhodesians, bless them, have got the message," he said.

To keep the economy alive during the critical period, some firms have drafted wives and girlfriends to fill the gaps. Others have summoned back retired workers.

China Steps Up War of Words

TOKYO (CP) — China and Vietnam continued their harsh battle of words today with the Chinese lashing out at Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh for his claim that "the presence of Vietnamese armed forces in Cambodia is a question which only concerns" Vietnam and Cambodia.

In a long commentary, China's Xinhua (Hsinhua) news agency said: "Now, three months after the Vietnamese aggressors launched the aggressive war against Kampuchea (Cambodia), they thought up these lame arguments — arguments which are hardly worth refuting."

The Xinhua commentary was a response to a Trinh statement broadcast Wednesday by the Vietnam News Agency. That broadcast said: "At the request of the People's Revolutionary Council of Kampuchea, Vietnam has agreed that Vietnamese armed forces assist the Kampuchean people in defending their country."

The Vietnamese-backed regime of Heng Samrin toppled the Pol Pot government in Cambodia last January. Pol Pot, a Chinese ally, and his forces have taken to the countryside and are waging a guerrilla war.

The Xinhau commentary is the latest in a series of charges and countercharges the two communist neighbors have traded since China invaded Vietnam on Feb. 17.

GM Cited In Trans Switch

CHICAGO (AP) — General Motors used transmissions designed for small cars in full-sized autos while telling consumers that the proper transmission was used, claims a federal suit filed Thursday.

The class-action suit asks that consumers affected by the switch since 1977 be allowed to return their cars for the full purchase price, have the transmissions changed for them, or be paid damages.

The suit, dealing with 1977, 1978 and 1979 model year cars, says at least 50,000, and possibly more than one million, consumers received transmissions designed for smaller cars.

Smith Troops Wear Disguise: Zambia

LUSAKA (Reuter) — Zambia's defence minister claims Rhodesian troops in disguise are operating inside Zambia to try to create hostility between black nationalist guerrillas based there and their Zambian hosts.

Grey Zulu, speaking in Livingstone on Wednesday, said Rhodesian scouts disguised as freedom fighters were harassing Zambian farmers and villagers so they would "resent the presence of freedom fighters," the semi-official Times of Zambia reported.

His remarks focussed attention on a problem of increasing concern to people in the Livingstone area and west of Lusaka, where numerous camps of the nationalist movement Zimbabwe African Peoples Union (ZAPU) are located.

Since the Rhodesians made a series of raids on ZAPU camps beginning last October, ZAPU guerrillas have been accused of harassing and beating up local people and white farmers they suspected of being Rhodesian spies or collaborators.

ZAPU officials have denied these charges, saying that thieves or Rhodesian soldiers stirring up trouble would naturally claim to be "freedom fighters" hoping to gain lenient treatment because of Zambia's support for the guerrillas.

Arson Suspect

BOSTON (AP) — An 18-year-old former employee of two Boston luxury hotels was charged with arson late Thursday for setting fires that seriously injured 13 persons and drove about 2,000 others into the streets, police said.

Police Capt. David MacDonald said the suspect, Julio Roderiguez of Boston, was taken into custody at a bus station, where he had purchased a ticket for New York City.

Roderiguez is to be arranged today in Boston Municipal Court, MacDonald said.

"More sex appeal than Charlie's Angels."

Contract Bridge : B. Jay Becker

You are South and the bidding has gone:

West	North	East	South
1♠	Dble	Pass	?

What would you bid now with each of the following five hands?

1. ♠74 ♡KJ5 ◇KJ872 ♣K93
2. ♠10 ♡Q642 ◇KQ97 ♣8754
3. ♠KJ85 ♡Q7 ◇J43 ♣AJ96
4. ♠6 ♡AQ96532 ◇J962 ♣4
5. ♠Q75 ♡9763 ◇AJ8 ♣AK5

1. Three diamonds. A takeout double indicates the values for at least an opening bid, but you don't respond to the double in the same way as you do to an opening bid. This is because, when you respond in minimum terms, your partner must allow for the possibility that you have no points at all or, possibly, only 3 or 4 points.

When you have game-promising values, as in this case where you hold 11 high-card points, you usually show them by making a jump response. This tells partner you have significantly greater values than he could expect if you had made only a minimum response — such as two diamonds.

2. Two hearts. Here you have a moderately good hand, but you're 2 or 3 points short of the values that would justify a jump response. Note that you bid two hearts rather than two diamonds. This is because you want to encourage partner to bid again, and he's more likely to do so when there's a possibility of a ten-trick game (in hearts) rather than an eleven-trick game (in diamonds). If partner raises two hearts to three hearts, you will gladly go on to four.

3. Two notrump. Your weakness in hearts and diamonds shouldn't stop you from bidding two notrump with 12 high-card points. Partner almost certainly has stength in both those suits. It would wrong to bid three clubs with a hand so admirably suited for notrump.

4. Four hearts. High-card points are not the sole determining factor in making a jump response, since tricks are what really count in bridge, not points. This hand rates to make seven tricks and North, for his double, is likely to provide three more. Note that the proper bid is four hearts, not three. This indicates that the jump response is probably based more on distribution than high cards.

5. Two spades. When partner doubles for takeout and you have 14 high-card points, your side has a game somewhere. But it's not clear at this point where that game is. So, rather than jump to three notrump with your relatively weak spade stopper, or to three hearts with such a weak suit, it is better to cuebid West's suit and thus ask partner to help locate the best spot. Your next bid will depend on North's response to the cuebid.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological forecast for Saturday, March 31
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You get green light. Ideas flow — and cash flow could also increase. Define terms, look behind the scenes, separate fact from wishful thinking. Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently. Relative calls you while on a short journey.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emphasis on money, protection, recovering lost or stolen articles, increasing income potential. Get priorities in order. Accept responsibility, more authority — and greater reward factor. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure in scenario.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You get credentials enabling you to gain wider distribution, recognition. Take lead, pioneer trails, procedures. Have confidence — judgment, intuition are on target. Make personal appearances. Explain views in direct, daring manner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Friend disappoints you — if you fail to properly interpret rules, regulations. Means take nothing for granted. The past is the past — move with the times. Lead the way in breaking new ground. Leo aids. One you trust is worthy, but confused.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Co-operate with Cancer associate. Emphasis on romance, creativity, speculation, seeing to it that hopes and wishes are transformed into realities. Hunch is on target. Individual who taught and aided you in past . . is again available.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis on finding ways to promote product — and yourself. One in authority is flexible — at this time. Present ideas and requests. Gemini, Sagittarius and Pisces figure prominently. Show that you can laugh at your own foibles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good Moon aspect coincides now with philosophical concepts, spirituality, distance, bridging language-cultural barriers. Aquarius, Taurus persons figure prominently. You could be aided through a special publication.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If you ask questions, you'll get answers. Know it, formulate theory and work to prove — or disprove it. Accent on area dealing with other people's money, the occult, the power of opposing views. You could be handed something on proverbial silver platter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make adjustment on home front. Restore harmony — be diplomatic. Maintain low profile. Permit others to have their say. Go slow, plan ahead, file material, protect your own legal rights. Spouse or "manager" plays key role.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obtain valid hint from Sagittarius message. Go slow, lie low, be thorough, check work procedures and employment prospects. Pisces is in your corner. Remember recent resolutions concerning proper rest — and nutrition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Relationships get very warm — nothing tepid or halfway. Older individual does have your best interests at heart. Know it and act accordingly. Children, speculation, affair of heart — these also crowd your agends.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on closing transaction, putting finishing touches on project. You gain chance to build on solid base. Aries, Libra figure prominently. Parent or authority figure plays dominant role. One who seeks your counsel could soon be in position to help you.

IF MARCH 31 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are independent, creative, rebellious, were on your own early. Scorpio, Leo persons play important roles in your life. You could change residence this year or make serious domestic adjustment, especilly around September. You have more responsibility — and money — in November. You are determined, stubborn, generous, tend toward impulsive actions. You make new starts and contacts in April. You are a person who invents pioneers and inspires others. Members of opposite sex seem either to love or hate you.

FUN WITH FIGURES

BY J. A. H. HUNTER

Charlie pointed across the street. "Thats an interesting number," he said. "Do you see what I mean?"

"On that sign?" Sandra replied. "It's just a regular four-figure number to me."

"But if you reverse it, taking the digits right to left, you multiply it by four," Charlie told her. "What about that?"

So it was rather special, but what was the number?

SHAWNIGAN LAKE

High class Strata Title development with superior residential qualities. Nice lots of approximately ⅓ acre, about 200' of sunny common beach, safe for children. Common tennis court and recreational area. Community water hook-up. Sewage drain fields installed. Ready to commence building a home from 1000 sq. ft. upward. Located near the new elementary school. Prices from $18,500 to $25,500. About half the price of a private waterfront lot. This is an opportunity that only comes once a lifetime.

SHAWNIGAN LAKE

Perfect seclusion on a high spot on the south end of the lake with unequalled view along the length of the lake. About three-quarters of an acre, 154 feet of leased waterfront with private foreshore, older family home with large living and dining rooms, spacious bedrooms and a fine den. Lake view from all these rooms. The basement has been developed into a 2 bedroom apartment for in-laws or rental purposes. This property was appraised in 1975 for $66,000 for mortgage purposes. It is now for sale for $69,000 due to pressing circumstances. A very good buy indeed.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

MRS. MARY E. STEVENS, Bruce W. Aldridge and Mrs. Eva Ford wish to extend their sincere thanks to all their friends for their kind support, flowers and cards on the loss of our beloved son, father and brother, Bruce Norman Aldridge.

309 IN MEMORIAM

LACKIE - In loving memory of Jim, who passed away March 30, 1968.
Time can never steal away
Remembrance of the past
Of you the one we loved and lost;
Our hearts will hold it fast.
Ever remembered by his loving wife Millie, daughter and son-in-law Edna and Cliff Robbins and granddaughters.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

H. P. BELL-IRVING
Lieutenant-Governor

[L.S.]

CANADA
PROVINCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

ELIZABETH the SECOND, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom, Canada, and Her other Realms and Territories, Queen, Head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith.

To all to whom these presents shall come —

GREETING
W. N. VANDER ZALM Minister
Municipal Affairs

WHEREAS by Section 8(5) of the Urban Transit Authority Act, it is provided that the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may on the recommendation of the Urban Transit Authority, order a Regional District, under the Municipal Act, to undertake a transit function; and, notwithstanding the Municipal Act, grant to a Regional District such objects, powers, duties, limitations and conditions as are considered necessary to enable it to undertake a transit function:

AMD WHEREAS the Urban Transit Authority has recommended to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council that the Capital Regional District undertake a transit function with all member municipalities participating:

AND WHEREAS the Regional Board of the Capital Regional District has requested that the powers and duties as may be necessary to enable it to provide and maintain public passenger transportation systems be a function of the Capital Regional District:

AND WHEREAS the provisions of section 8 of the Urban Transit Authority Act have been met:

NOW KNOW YE THAT by these presents We do order and proclaim that on, from, and after the date hereof the following be added to the objects, powers, obligations, duties, limitations and conditions of the Capital Regional District:

DIVISION XXIV — URBAN TRANSIT

1. All member municipalities shall participate and share in the cost incurred by the Regional District pursuant to this division.

2. The Capital Regional District is empowered to enter into Transit Service Agreements, Annual Operating Agreements and other agreements in respect of planning, establishing service and fare levels for the purpose of the provision and maintenance of public passenger transportaion systems, custom transit services, and research or demonstration projects relating to the provision of public passenger transportaion, as provided in the Urban Transit Authority Act and Regulations thereto.

3. The Capital Regional District is further empowered to undertake such duties and obligations as are provided in the Urban Transit Authority Act and Regulations thereto, including, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, those duties and obligations provided in Sections 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, and 15 of the Urban Transit Authority Act.

Rising Vegetable Prices Fanning Allotment Appeal

hilda beastall

Home gardeners become impatient about getting a start on growing vegetables this year as prices show little sign of reaching affordable levels.

There is no doubt that the upward trend last year and this has caused increased interest in registering for allotment plots with only 50 or so still available in the five Greater Victoria sites as of last year.

With home vegetable plots already in production from last year's sowings and plantings it is good to have continuous though small pickings of that most important class vegetable—the greens. The greatest importance lies in having these fresh. This can be only when gathered a few minutes before a mealtime. As cut tissues are exposed to air, vitamins are lost.

Root vegetables, potatoes, carrots, turnips, parsnips, do not lose freshness at the same rate though there is no doubt taste changes. Buy the root types where quality appears high in relation to price. Your own sowings will come along later, to last through the rest of the year.

Last year we wrote about the uses of comfrey both as a food, as plant fertilizer, and as compost maker. Gardeners who bought a plant to get started, will notice thick new shoots now coming through the soil. Take a sharp knife and cut off a few leaf clusters just above soil level. Use them with other green vegetables for their high ratings in vitamins and minerals.

Cabbage stumps left in the ground after cutting late cabbages last summer sent up small shoots from the slashed stump surfaces. These are now producing little soft leafy cabbages as delicate in flavor as anyone could wish, even though you say you don't like cabbage. Add some of these to the comfrey shoots; cook for 10 to 12 minutes.

You may have Swiss chard plants from last summer's sowing. This is a hardy vegetable in normal winters, giving plentiful leaves in succession. New growth is good at this time, making still another green vegetable for fresh picking.

Chives are something easy to grow continuously nine months of the year. Add these for mild onion flavor in salads or in stir-fry meals in place of more expensive onions. Or add to the mixed dish of comfrey, young cabbage sprouts and Swiss chard.

The balcony gardener need not be left out of these money saving benefits since a tub or old galvanized pail will grow a comfrey plant, and a couple of tin cans hold chives enough to pick all year.

On a balcony there can also be one tub devoted to chickweed, the weedy little bright green plant with tiny starry flowers (Stellaria media) which is an annoyance to most local gardeners. Some know it as a soil improver, adding nitrogen in moderate amount and fine humus as it is dug into the garden each spring before it forms seeds. A few use the young green leafy heads with the tight flower buds as extra vitamins and minerals with bought salad greens.

The flavor is delicate and delightful. If you know you have chickweed, cut a small handful with scissors, rinse under water, shake dry, and put into a thin bread-and-butter sandwich.

Use the green vegetable now from the garden. If your vegetable garden is bare at this time, plan to sow and plant this year to add plentiful green vegetables for use in late winter and early spring the next time around.

Organizers say the course "is a chance to be part of a small group of women and have the opportunity to rediscover your strengths and to learn how to set goals and make decisions about your life."

Airline Sacks Older Staff?

NEW YORK (AP) — Japan Air Lines employees between the ages of 40 and 65 who work in the United States are being discriminated against because of their age, says a lawsuit filed by Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall. The suit filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court says that since 1975 the airline has violated the Age Discrimination in Employment Act by retiring, laying off, demoting, discharging or refusing to rehire workers between those ages.

Development proposals outlining the proposed use of the property must be submitted with all offers, which must be for cash and accompanied by a certified deposit cheque for $5,000. The highest or any offer will not necessarily be accepted. Unsuccessful bidders' deposits will be refunded.

Sealed offers will be received by the City Manager, City Hall, Victoria, B.C., until 4 p.m., Thursday, April 26, 1979.

Upset Price: $700,000.

Offer to Purchase forms and further information may be obtained from J. S. Elkin, Planning Department, City Hall, at 385-5711, local 290.

Harvey Makes Hit

SCHROEDER

A slip of the tongue by Speaker Harvey Schroeder deflated a tension-filled question period Thursday.

Tempers had flared when NDP leader Dave Barrett rose to be recognized.

"The Honorable, the Premier," Schroeder said.

The opposition benches erupted into desk thumping and cheers and shouts of "Harvey knows your role."

Schroeder tried in vain to clamp down on the uproar. "I'm glad all honorable members understand that errors can be made."

"That's not what Freud said," Graham Lea (NDP-Prince Rupert) shot back.

Premier Bill Bennett told Schroeder that if Barrett ever did become premier, "that would be an error indeed."

In his speech, Barrett accused Bill Bennett of resisting the federal agency that reviews foreign takeovers of Canadian firms.

Barrett asked the premier if he had expressed such a view to federal Trade and Industry Minister Jack Horner, since Horner has said B.C. seems to oppose the Foreign Investment Review Agency.

Bennett replied that Barrett was incorrect in his supposition and said B.C. has no such policy.

Barrett then wanted to know why B.C. had consented to the sale of 74 provincial firms to foreign companies in the past two years without any protest.

Shilly Shally Over Maggie

Tourism Minister Elwood Veitch repeatedly refused to answer questions in the legislature Thursday on plans to scrap the Princess Marguerite.

Veitch would only say that the government intends to keep the Victoria-Seattle run operating.

The Princess Marguerite will not meet strict U.S. pollution requirements at the end of this season without a $1 million refit to install sewage holding tanks.

NDP tourism critic Eileen Dailly (Burnaby North) said the old steamship is far too valuable to be scrapped.

Veitch noted the Marguerite brought $8 million in tourist money to Victoria last year and said he will ensure the run is maintained.

On-Job Training

Graduate students in B.C. universities will be given a chance to gain practical work experience through temporary jobs with the provincial government.

Up to 100, four-month jobs will be created under the labor ministry's youth employment program.

The students will be given jobs in government ministries allowing them to test their aptitude in their chosen fields and to gain the necessary experience to find employment after graduation.

Gardom Rules Out Probe

Organized crime in B.C. has not reached a level where a special crime commission to look into it would be useful or worth the money, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Thursday.

The attorney-general's decision to rule out a crime inquiry for the time being was immediately attacked by the NDP.

"Quite frankly, the need is here now," said former attorney-general Alex Macdonald.

Organized crime is the fifth growth industry in the province, he said. White collar crime is growing and goes largely undetected and unprosecuted.

Macdonald said the heroin trade in B.C. is a $250 million a year industry and a crime commission is necessary so the criminal element that handles million of dollars in B.C. can be brought forward to answer to the people.

Gardom said the Co-ordinate Law Enforcement Unit looked into the possibility of a crime commission.

But CLEU told him that in B.C. there is neither the same degree of entrenchment of organized crime nor the type of corruption here as in other areas that make the establishment of crime commissions necessary.

Gardom said however that law enforcement agencies will continue to monitor the situation and the vehicle to set up a crime commission is ready to go if one becomes necessary.

Macdonald said the government's refusal to act is unacceptable to the NDP.

Discussion of the commission interrupted regular debate on the throne speech in the legislature.

There had been speculation that Gardom would order a commission because of evidence of organized crime produced on the CBC documentary Connections.

Gardom said he saw the program, and although he thinks it was well done, he feels there is no need for such a commission since B.C. already has a wide variety of mechanisms for combatting organized crime.

B.C. has CLEU, integrated intelligence service, large drug squads maintained by the police, an efficient RCMP commercial crime section and provincial regulatory agencies all co-operating.

Although the television program noted former Appeals court justice Angelo Branca was friendly with suspected crime figures, Gardom said police authorities assured him there is mo evidence or allegation of criminality against him.

Court Won't Rule

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal dismissed Thursday an application to fine or jail a Powell River newspaper editor who refused to reveal her sources.

The application by the B.C. Ferry Corp. was an attempt to force editor Wendy Fitzgibbons to reveal her sources concerning a story last fall after a ferry crash at Powell River.

Ms. Fitzgibbons wrote that the captain of the vessel was not on the bridge when the ferry hit a dock. The captain was fired following the crash. At a later arbitration hearing, Ms. Fitzgibbons refused to reveal her sources.

The appeal court ruled that it does not have the jurisdiction to consider the request to fine or jail the newspaper editor.

Victoria Rally For PM

Trudeau will fly into Victoria on Friday morning and will address a rally in Centennial Square at 12:15 p.m.

Also present at the rally will be Liberal candidates David Anderson (Cowichan-Malahat) and Robert Monaghan (Victoria) and declared candidate Alan Peterson (Esquimalt-Saanich).

In case of bad weather, the rally will be held in the McPherson Theatre.

Trudeau will leave the rally to fly to Campbell River where he will campaign on behalf of Jack Pearsall, the incumbent Liberal MP for Comox-Powell River. That evening he will return to Vancouver to attend the nominating meeting for the North Vancouver-Burnaby. The only declared candidate for the nomination is Gordon Gibson, former provincial Liberal leader now a top Trudeau aide.

On Saturday (April 7) the prime minister will campaign in the Lower Mainland.

N-Plant Spews Radiation

Evacuations Urged by Gov.

Times News Services

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania Governor Dick Thornburgh today advised the evacuation of preschool children and pregnant women from within eight kilometres of the Three Mile Island Nuclear plant following a new release of radioactivity from the crippled facility.

He ordered schools in the area closed and urged residents within 16 kilometres of the establishment to stay indoors.

The governor had at first said he was considering ording an evacuation, but decided against the move after discussing the matter with officials of the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

The governor's statement said there was "a series of uncontrolled bursts of radiation from about 6:40 a.m. until about 9 a.m. this morning."

However, Frank Ingram, an NRC official, said in Washington that the release was not unexpected and occurred as an automatic part of the recirculation of reactor cooling water.

Ingram said NRC staff members in Pennsylvania, in touch with the power plant operators, reported that the plant had again begun using its primary cooling system, which had been largely out of operation since the initial accident Wednesday.

As this cooling water circulates, it passes through a system which removes radioactivity and during normal operation small amounts of radioactivity are routinely released to the atmosphere.

When the primary system was restarted, this process took place, but the radioactivity released to the atmosphere was, at first, higher than normal, Ingram said.

He said radioactive releases were continuing, through this cooling process, but were decreasing "to somewhere near the normal range".

Ingram said the amounts of radioactivity released by the start-up of the primary system were not known exactly but appeared to be small.

Police Pick Up Pieces

It was like a demolition derby on Victoria streets overnight.

Traffic officers had their busiest night in months picking up the pieces after nine accidents.

A spokesman said damage will run into the thousands of dollars but only one person was injured badly enough to stay in hospital.

The youth's car went out of control after the collision, bounced off a signal standard and slammed into a power pole. Firemen had to use their Jaws of Life machine to remove him from the wreckage. The other car took off.

Police were chasing the car — reported stolen only seconds before — when the driver lost control coming off the bridge.

The car skidded on to a boulevard, struck a pole and flipped over in the air three times before coming to rest on the pavement.

The driver jumped out and started to flee but was caught a short distance away by officers.

He was to appear in provincial court charged with impaired driving and car theft.

The car, which was a write-off, is owned by Laure Alice Ayer, 29, of 1436 Fairfield.

Police said she had parked the car in the 1500-block Government, and leaving the keys in the ignition, hurried into a nearby building.

IRA Bomb Kills British MP

LONDON (CP) — Airey Neave, a top Conservative party official and the party's spokesman on Northern Ireland affairs, was assassinated today when a bomb exploded just outside the 700-year-old House of Commons. The militant Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) claimed responsibility.

Police said the bomb went off as the car, described as a blue Vauxhall and believed to have been driven by Neave, was at an entrance ramp leading to the underground parking garage at the sprawling Palace of Westminster, the seat of Parliament on the River Thames.

A Scotland Yard official said the blast was caused by a half-pound explosive device placed in the front of the car.

In Belfast, IRA sources told reporters that their Belfast Brigade had sent a special group of bombers to London to carry out the killing.

Police on the scene said they believed the person who planted the bomb escaped on a motor scooter. A city-wide alert was issued for the man, however, a description of the suspect was not disclosed.

Arthur Bottomley, another member of Parliament, was driving in a car just behind Neave's and saw the blast.

"At first I thought the explosion was in my car," he said. "Dust and glass was flying everywhere."

Conservative leader Margaret Thatcher cancelled a nationwide television broadcast tonight which was to have launched her election campaign. She did so, she said, as a tribute to "an old and very dear friend."

Police said the 63-year-old Neave, Conservative MP for Abingdon in Berkshire west of London, was trapped inside the vehicle for some time. London Ambulance Service later said he was dead on arrival at nearby Westminster Hospital.

Several MPs were in the House of Commons chamber debating a bill in the final days of this Parliament when the blast occurred at about 3 p.m. London time.

Some MPS and journalists rushed from the neo-Gothic building into the adjacent Palace Yard upon hearing the explosion. But police formed a cordon and kept them back because of the

Amin's Army Shrinks, Residents Flee City

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — President Idi Amin's shrinking army of loyal troops held on to Kampala today as Tanzanian invaders and Ugandan exiles pushed to within 13 kilometres of the capital. Thousands of frightened residents streamed from the city.

"All we are sure of is that, for now, Kampala is still in the hands of the Ugandan government and army," said a diplomat there who was reached by telephone from Nairobi.

And in Tanzania, the government said a Soviet-built Libyan bomber attacked the northern Tanzanian town of Mwanza on Thursday, dropping five bombs in and around the town on the shores of Lake Victoria, injuring one person. The Libyans are helping Amin fight an invasion force of Ugandan exiles and Tanzanian troops.

In Kampala, there was no confirmation of claims by Ugandan exiles that Amin had fled with loyal Nubian troops toward his hometown of Arua, possibly to make a last stand in that remote corner of northwestern Uganda.

One resident of Kampala said gunshots echoed through the streets as "drunken Ugandan deserters wandered around firing in the air."

No fighting was reported within the hilly city of 400,000, and residents said heavy rains cut short the invaders' shelling Thursday night. They said two children were killed by a shell that fell in the backyard of a house in western Kampala but no other casualties were reported.

They reported Ugandan tanks drove through the city Thursday afternoon heading toward Natete, a road junction 10 kilometres to the southwest. They returned after dark following a noisy battle that lasted several hours, the informants said. The outcome of the fighting was not known.

Long lines of refugees, many carrying babies and meager bundles, fled Kampala on foot. Scores of foreigners, including diplomats and their families and UN employees, drove east to Kenya.

Food Man Tells of $8,500 Pay-Off

TORONTO (CP) — Discounts and allowances paid by food suppliers to large supermarket chains have soared in the last five years and McCain Foods Ltd. products have been pulled off store shelves and a large order cancelled because the company refused to pay more "inside money" to a supermarket.

Jack Morgan of J.P. Morgan Ltd. told an Ontario royal commission that he paid chains up to $8,500 five years ago for a full-scale promotion of his products, which included advertising and in-store promotion.

Executives in the food business say the cost now is as high as $30,000, Morgan told the royal commission on discounts and allowances in the food industry.

Vice-president of marketing for McCain, Archie McLean, said his firm spends about half its advertising and marketing budget on what he calls inside money — amounts paid to supermarkets for co-operative advertising, listing allowances or to encourage a larger purchase of a product.

He declined, however, to elaborate when questioned by a lawyer for the Ontario Federation of Agriculture.

Commissioner Wilfred Leach told the lawyer, James Murray, that it was unfair to press McLean if he did not want not to be more specific.

Morgan said listing fees or charges, levied by the supermarkets in return for carrying a new product, began with a $50 charge to cover the cost of listing a new product in a chain's computer.

Separate testimony to the commission this week has indicated that Dominion Stores Ltd. received $5,000 last year and Loblaws Ltd. $2,000 for listing and promoting Lyle's Syrup, a new sugar cane syrup sold in Canada through Redpath Sugars Ltd.

Morgan said listing allowances, or discounts off the usual price for a new product, can cost a supplier substantial amounts of money.

He said he once negotiated the sale of Dutch Melba Toast with an Ontario chain store, giving the store a five-per-cent discount as a listing allowance and an additional five per cent for delivering in carload lots.

Expecting a larger order, Morgan said he also agreed to give the chain one free case of Melba Toast for each store.

When the chain ordered only one case a store, effectively netting itself a 50-per-cent discount out of the free cases alone, "I took a bath, all right."

Morgan said discounts and allowances are accepted in the food industry as normal cost.

"They're viewed with some suspicion (by the general public) because people don't know about them or understand them," Morgan said.

He said he would prefer to

Canadians Are Better Off Than U.S. At Least for This Century - Imperial

Fuel: We Can Squeeze By

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Canadian drivers shouldn't face any major fuel shortages this century but their American cousins could hit an energy dead end, according to a spokesman for Imperial oil.

The prospects for gasoline appear good for a long time to come, said the spokesman for the company, Canada's oldest and largest operator.

"Our least concern is the transportation business," said Don Coghill, on behalf of regional manager of corporate affairs George Wisener.

The way Imperial sees things up to the turn of the century Canadian cars will continue to run on gasoline. Other transport will still burn diesel fuel even though heating oils will be curtailed.

By then public and private transportation in the U.S. will be into rationing and well along the way to using alternative fuel sources.

The difference between Canada and the U.S. is in security of supplies.

Canadian domestic and overseas sources of crude petroleum appear safe for the predictable future, with the added advantage that Canada has vast undeveloped synthetic crude resources plus a large reservoir of natural gas that will steadily replace heating oils.

The less light and heavy oil burned domestically and to generate electrical power, the more diesel-type fuel will be refined.

Coghill said there will be no short-term and slight long-term effect on motive fuel supply because an increasing proportion of crude oil will go into gas and diesel fuel.

Later, as costs for refining synthetics from tar sands and oil shale become more economic, motor-driven transport will have that alternative to draw from.

"Particularly when we are looking at zero growth rate in demand for petroleum products," he said.

He said it is difficult to reconcile this view with the U.S. problem of shrinking supply, especially when substitute gasoline is already being made and sold at two or three cents a gallon more than gasoline in parts of the U.S.

Motorists in Iowa, for example, can buy gasahol, a mixture of gasoline and alcohol derived from corn, a principal crop in that state.

There are many gasoline substitutes, including hydrogen — a very dangerous and difficult to handle fuel — nitromethane, nitrous oxide, hydrogenated coal and combinations of synthetic petroleum byproducts.

Researchers are working constantly on these variations and lately have directed much interest toward recyled waste as renewable sources of fuels.

Imperial conducts its own research or research through its multinational parent, Exxon, and keeps abreast of all developments in the energy field.

The company's Canadian holdings include large soft coal deposits. Coghill said coal gasification, solar heat, wind and tidal energy are all part of the Canadian energy future and although Imperial has no direct research in nuclear energy, it is represented in the industry.

"As an energy company, we are certainly looking at alternative methods of generating power."

Wind power would appear to have some application in the north where winds are more constant and the population to be served is not large. But it seems impractical in the heavily-populated south.

"This sort of thing is very impractical in transportation," Coghill added.

The future may bring electric cars somewhere down the road but meanwhile there will be a greater proportion of lighter, smaller cars with conventional, much more efficient gasoline and diesel engines.

He said costs are an obstacle to marketing alternative motor fuels at present.

Methanol, for instance, costs about twice as much as gasoline made from synthetic petroleum and is not therefore at present a feasible alternative.

Dr. Walter Cretney, a hydrocarbon chemist at the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay, said nitromethane is a liquid often used as a solvent.

As a fuel, it might cost more than ethyl alcohol, comprising up to 50 per cent of gasahol.

Nitrous oxide, laughing gas, is sometimes an additive in auto racing fuel and was used during the Second World War with aviation gas to give combat aircraft short bursts of extra power. It is relatively inexpensive.

Cretney said scientists are awaiting the forthcoming development on University of B.C. campus of a 15,000-square foot coal research and teaching centre for engineering and geology.

TOWN TALK

He was a fixture at Government House, was Gar Dixon.

He served as secretary to more lieutenant-governors than you can shake a stick at and what he didn't know about protocol and procedure wasn't worth knowing.

Stories about him are legion (if you ever get the chance, just ask the Queen who the best dancer is in B.C.) but the best Dixon story of all happened Wednesday when the current occupant of Government House honored some Boy Scouts.

But Gar ran into one of those total mental blocks where the most familiar name — it could be your mother's — just won't come.

For what seemed like almost 30 seconds, Gar hummed, hawed, shook his head and was only taken off the hook when the lieutenant-governor stepped forward, and almost kindly, said not to worry, Gar, he quite understood, there had been so many lieutenant-governors . . .

Some operators and supervisors were aware of what was being done, Patterson said, but the people involved were not aware it was wrong.

Groves Ready to Run After Grieve Drops Out

The president of the NDP's Esquimalt-Saanich Constituency Association has offered to replace federal election candidate Paul Grieve who resigned for personal business reasons.

Jack Groves, 59, a vice-president of the Victoria Labor Council and an executive member of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America, said he will seek the nomination at a meeting April 9 at St. Christopher's Church Hall at Tillicum and Carey. Deadline for nominations is noon April 6.

Grieve was nominated almost a year ago at a time when an election call appeared imminent.

His construction company now requires his full attention after suffering financial difficulties and Grieve said he does not want to embarrass the party because of his situation.

A spokesman for the provincial NDP headquarters in Vancouver said if the election had been set a month earlier or a month later than the May 22 date, it would have suited Grieve.

"But it came at an awkward time for him."

The federal riding executive will consider the question of new candidates for the nomination, he said.

Earlier, a controversy arose in the NDP Esquimalt-Port Renfrew provincial riding association when Frank Mitchell won the nomination by one vote over John Brewin, whose supporters want a new nomination convention.

Larry Mann, an Esquimalt alderman, said the nominating chairman Bill Doneley erred when he cast the deciding vote in Mitchell's favor, that a tie vote meant no election and the candidates were entitled to a new election.

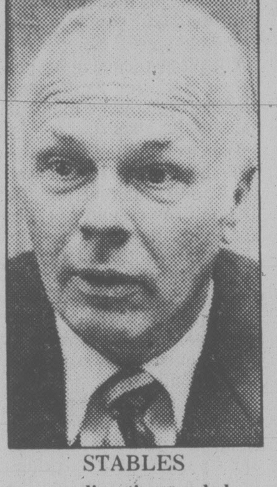
The subject will be dealt with by the party's provincial executive in Powell River at the weekend.

Stables Knocks Flip-Flopping Over Planning

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Planning in Greater Victoria School District has "flopped around" over the last six years while administrators struggle to second-guess the school board, superintendent Allan Stables has told the board's planning committee.

Trustees' reluctance to take a stand on school closures and other planning issues is handicapping planners, Stables said.



STABLES
. . . direction needed

Three elementary and one high school in the district could be closed right now, he said. He didn't name them.

Stables and administrative assistant Evan Oakley are preparing a comprehensive report of all school facilities.

The report, which applies various class sizes to existing space, will be submitted to the planning committee April 11.

He said the major problem facing the administration is lack of direction from the board.

And since the board has no planning policies, administration assumes it is carrying out the board's wishes.

Administrative interpretations of the board's wishes have never been clarified.

"Administration has collected all sorts of data but that isn't planning," Stables said.

Clear-cut policies must be developed on school capacities, class size, boundaries and busing, Stables said.

He said Victoria has always followed a neighborhood school concept and has not been in favor of busing students to other less crowded schools.

District planner Evan Oakley said closure has always been contrary to the trend of the district and any move in that direction bound to be unpopular. That's where the board faces its greatest difficulty.

But busing takes place in other districts and there is no reason it can't here, Oakley said.

Trustee Mark Fisher said he favored open boundaries and suggested students be given bus passes and allowed to the school of their choice on a first-come first-served basis.

A lengthy motion by Fisher to develop specific policies to back up capital project requests to the ministry of education was broken into two parts.

The first part, to undertake district planning and set up school boundaries, was retained by the planning committee.

The second part of the motion, to get architectural and professional appraisals of all proposed building projects and to separate the capital from the maintenance requests, was referred to the finance committee.

Fisher said his motion was the culmination of several years of frustration watching the ministry turn down capital projects because the board didn't have its planning policy clearly defined.

Stables said changing boundaries is the greatest political move the board can make.

Boundaries have changed little over the years because parents get upset.

Fisher said the district will eventually be forced to close some schools. The board should concentrate on renovating its best buildings rather than patching up every school in the district.

The district has $100 million invested in facilities and most of them are "junk," he said.

Administrators making between $30,000 and $40,000 a year spend most of their time sticking pins into a board trying to chart the shifting student populations.

They play the game of moving portables around the district to cater to the population expansions and contractions.

SOCIAL WORKERS HANDED THE JOB

Ombudsman Service for VGH

Social workers at Victoria General Hospital will provide an ombudsman service for a six-month trial period, hospital directors decided Thursday.

Dr. Michael Ashwood-Smith said today the existing patient and family counselling service operated by five or six qualified social workers will handle patient complaints and also investigate the quality of hospital care.

The service will handle complaints that might not ordinarily receive attention.

Monthly reports will be submitted to the hospital board's quality assurance committee, headed by Ashwood-Smith. At the end of six months the program will be evaluated.

Appointment of a full-time ombudsman will be discussed in six months if the experimental service uncovers a lot of complaints.

The board has no idea how many grievances the service will handle or how much it will cost, but the necessary funds have been guaranteed, Ashwood-Smith said.

Every patient entering the hospital will be informed of the service.

The counselling service will interview randomly-selected patients about the quality of care they are receiving and patients will also be interviewed after they leave hospital.

The board last month decided against appointing an ombudsman to deal with complaints from patients.

Dr. Eugene Kaellis, who proposed the appointment, said the hospital society which elects the board had approved by a substantial margin a resolution calling for the hospital to provide for the position last September.

Personnel committee chairman Carol Pickup said the hospital couldn't afford the position, which would require a $25,000 salary.

Recently-appointed provincial ombudsman Karl Friedmann will also be responsible for hospital care, she noted.

Pickup said there have been few complaints about hospital care.

But Kaellis said in 1972 more than 150 North American hospitals had ombudsmen and many more have been hired since then.

Court Won't Rule

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal dismissed Thursday an application to fine or jail a Powell River newspaper editor who refused to reveal her sources.

The application by the B.C. Ferry Corp. was an attempt to force editor Wendy Fitzgibbons to reveal her sources concerning a story last fall after a ferry crash at Powell River.

Ms. Fitzgibbons wrote that the captain of the vessel was not on the bridge when the ferry hit a dock. The captain was fired following the crash. At a later arbitration hearing, Ms. Fitzgibbons refused to reveal her sources.

The appeal court ruled that it does not have the jurisdiction to consider the request to fine or jail the newspaper editor.

Victoria Rally For PM

Trudeau will fly into Victoria on Friday morning and will address a rally in Centennial Square at 12:15 p.m.

Also present at the rally will be Liberal candidates David Anderson (Cowichan-Malahat) and Robert Monaghan (Victoria) and declared candidate Alan Peterson (Esquimalt - Saanich).

In case of bad weather, the rally will be held in the McPherson Theatre.

Trudeau will leave the rally to fly to Campbell River where he will campaign on behalf of Jack Pearsall, the incumbent Liberal MP for Comox-Powell River. That evening he will return to Vancouver to attend the nominating meeting for the North Vancouver-Burnaby. The only declared candidate for the nomination is Gordon Gibson, former provincial Liberal leader now a top Trudeau aide.

On Saturday (April 7) the prime minister will campaign in the Lower Mainland.

Nuclear Disaster Feared

Evacuations Urged by Gov.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission said today the Three Mile Island atomic power plant in Pennsylvania faces "the ultimate risk of a melt-down" — the most serious type of nuclear catastrophe — within the next few days as engineers try to cool down the crippled reactor.

No such accident has ever happened. But if it did, NRC officials have said, it could contaminate many square miles of land and conceivably could kill thousands of people.

Clouds of radioactive gas began escaping from the plant shortly after the initial incident. The radiation leaks continued until today, causing state officials to recommed the evacuation of pregnant women and preschool children within eight kilometres of the plant.

Dudley Thompson, a senior official in the NRC office of inspection, said the threat is posed by a steam bubble inside the reactor that could increase in size as pressures within the reactor are lowered, leaving the core without vital cooling water.

"We are faced with a decision within a few days, rather than hours (on how to cool down the core)," Thompson told reporters at an NRC news centre.

"We face the ultimate risk of a melt-down" depending on "the manner we cope with the problem. If there is even a small chance of meltdown, we will recommend precautionary evacuations."

When a reactor core loses its cooling water, temperatures caused by uranium fuel can increase high enough to melt the reactor core and — at worst — melt through the thick protective concrete shell of the containment building.

The Three Mile Island plant near Harrisburg, Pa., was stricken early Wednesday by a chain reaction of failures, including human errors and mechanical breakdowns.

Nuclear Regulatory spokesman Frank Ingram said this afternoon the situation was currently in a stable condition, but he said

In Kampala, there was no confirmation of claims by Ugandan exiles that Amin had fled with loyal Nubian troops toward his hometown of Arua, possibly to make a last stand in that remote corner of northwestern Uganda.

One resident of Kampala said gunshots echoed through the streets as "drunken Ugandan deserters wandered around firing in the air."

No fighting was reported within the hilly city of 400,000, and residents said heavy rains cut short the invaders' shelling Thursday night. They said two children were killed by a shell that fell in the backyard of a house in western Kampala but no other casualties were reported.

They reported Ugandan tanks drove through the city Thursday afternoon heading toward Natete, a road junction 10 kilometres to the southwest. They returned after dark following a noisy battle that lasted several hours, the informants said. The outcome of the fighting was not known.

Long lines of refugees, many carrying babies and meager bundles, fled Kampala on foot. Scores of foreigners, including diplomats and their families and UN employees, drove east to Kenya.

Meet The Stars

Ellen Burstyn has made an impact on Hollywood as a tough but funny actress. After a fairly ordinary career she achieved stardom and won an Academy award in 1975 for her role as an abandoned wife and mother in Alice Doesn't Live Here Anymore.

Born Edna Gilhooley in 1932, she started her motion picture career in 1964 in the sardonic comedy Goodbye Charlie. She also appeared in The Last Picture Show and The Exorcist.

Readers have a chance to win a trip for two to Hollywood if they enter the annual Times-VI90 Visit the Stars contest and correctly predict the Oscar winners for best actress, best actor and best picture as chosen April 9.

Food Man Tells of $8,500 Pay-Off

TORONTO (CP) — Discounts and allowances paid by food suppliers to large supermarket chains have soared in the last five years and McCain Foods Ltd. products have been pulled off store shelves and a large order cancelled because the company refused to pay more "inside money" to a supermarket

Jack Morgan of J.P. Morgan Ltd. told an Ontario royal commission that he paid chains up to $8,500 five years ago for a full-scale promotion of his products, which included advertising and in-store promotion.

Executives in the food business say the cost now is as high as $30,000, Morgan told the royal commission on discounts and allowances in the food industry.

Vice-president of marketing for McCain, Archie McLean, said his firm spends about half its advertising and marketing budget on what he calls inside money — amounts paid to supermarkets for co-operative advertising, listing allowances or to encourage a larger purchase of a product.

He declined, however, to elaborate when questioned by a lawyer for the Ontario Federation of Agriculture.

Commissioner Wilfred Leach told the lawyer, James Murray, that it was unfair to press McLean if he did not want not to be more specific.

Morgan said listing fees or charges, levied by the supermarkets in return for carrying a new product, began with a $50 charge to cover the cost of listing a new product in a chain's computer.

Separate testimony to the commission this week has indicated that Dominion Stores Ltd. received $5,000 last year and Loblaws Ltd. $2,000 for listing and promoting Lyle's Syrup, a new sugar cane syrup sold in Canada through Redpath Sugars Ltd.

Morgan said listing allowances, or discounts off the usual price for a new product, can cost a supplier substantial amounts of money.

He said he once negotiated the sale of Dutch Melba Toast with an Ontario chain store, giving the store a five-per-cent discount as a listing allowance and an additional five per cent for delivering in carload lots.

Expecting a larger order, Morgan said he also agreed to give the chain one free case of Melba Toast for each store.

When the chain ordered only one case a store, effectively netting itself a 50-per-cent discount out of the free cases alone. "I took a bath, all right."

Morgan said discounts and allowances are accepted in the food industry as normal cost.

"They're viewed with some suspicion (by the general public) because people don't know about them or understand them," Morgan said.

He said he would prefer to

Jimmy Got His Radiation

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has the dubious distinction of being the first country to have a nuclear reactor accident — one witnessed by the current president of the United States.

The mishap, witnessed by a young United States naval officer named Jimmy Carter, occured Dec. 12, 1952, when a combination of human error and technical faults sent power surging through the government's NRX research reactor at Chalk River, Ont., about 200 kilometres northwest of Ottawa.

A White House spokesman said the future president received one year's permissible dosage of radiation in about two minutes when he descended into the the hellishly-hot reactor core to help dissemble it.

For more than a year Carter and another man who helped dismantle the melted reactor parts had to save their feces and urine for radiation tests.

Carter had been detached from his post as senior officer of the United States submarine Sea Wolf to examine American and Canadian nuclear facilities.

The power over-load melted some fuel rods and released a large cloud of radioactivity from the container into the atmosphere before heavy-water coolant was dumped in to cool things off. The accident took months to clean up.

Federal Deficit Up Again

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal spending deficit rose to $10.9 billion in the first 11 months of the fiscal years, up from $7.85 billion in the same period a year earlier, Finance Minister Jean Chretien reported Thursday.

Chretien said in a release that spending to the end of February totalled $41.1 billion, up from $36.8 billion a year earlier.

Total revenues to the end of February were $30.2 billion, up from $28.9 billion a year ago.

$40,000 Prize For Humane Trap

A $40,000 prize fund has been established by the provincial government for inventors who develop humane traps to replace the leg-hold trap for a species of animals or a group of species.

The fund, earmarked from provincial lottery earnings, will be allocated through the environment ministry which is responsible for the fur industry.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said an additional $60,000 has been set aside for research awards to investigate, evaluate and assess improved trapping devices.

Management of the fund and awards will be under the jurisdiction of a Committee for Humane Trapping to be established by the ministry.

Review and testing of any device recommended for prizes will be carried out in consultation with the scientific and technical subcommittee of the federal-provincial humane trapping committee.

there was "evidence of severe damage" to nuclear fuel in the reactor.

The fuel damage caused extreme levels of radiation to be released inside the reactor, increased the level of radiation escaping to the outside world and made cooling the reactor a difficult, risky undertaking, officials said.

This morning, pregnant women and pre-school age children living within an eight-kilometre radius of the nuclear plant were urged to evacuate the area.

Gov. Dick Thornburgh, who urged the evacuation as a precautionary measure, also closed all 23 schools within eight kilometres of the plant and urged anyone within 16 kilometres to stay indoors "until further notice."

As well, the state set up about 15 mass care centres outside the evacuation area in the four counties of York, Dauphin, Cumberland and Lancaster.

As plant officials predicted at least five more days of radiation leaks, some residents packed belongings in their cars and trucks and left their homes. Thornburgh considered, than rejected, ordering a general evacuation. He said it was not now necessary, but added: "We cannot predict what the situation will be in 24 hours."

Stocks of companies in the nuclear-power industries, meanwhile, declined broadly on Wall Street today as investors watched the situation at Harrisburg.

According to analysts, word of the release of more radiation from the plant touched off selling in several stocks.

The company recently released a film, The China Syndrome, about a fictional accident at a nuclear facility.

Analysts said investors apparently were buying the stock on the belief that the Harrisburg incident, and publicity resulting from it, would intensify interest in the movie.

In Toronto, an official of Environment Canada said there was only a remote possibility that any of the radiation from the plant would reach Eastern Canada. Pat Pender said no prediction could be made without knowing the concentration in the immediate area and the altitute it had reached.

Meanwhile, government and plant officials issued conflicting reports on whether the new leak was expected, but they agreed that the amount of radiation was a surprise.

Thornburgh, after speaking with President Carter and the chairman of the NRC, said there was "no reason for panic or implementation of emergency measures." The evacuation and other steps taken were "based on my belief that an excess of caution is best," he added.

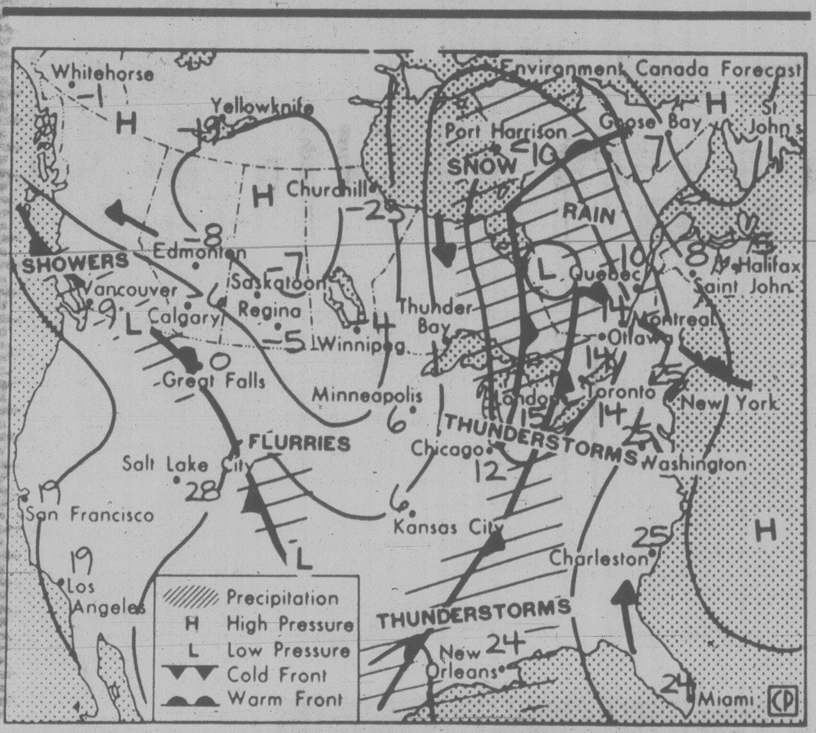

Map valid until midday Saturday

Cloudy but cold weather was reported from interior locations overnight. Snowflurries were frequent at some points while on the coast showers were observed. More showers or snowflurries are forecast for most of B.C. today. However some sunshine is likely on the coast. A high pressure ridge will move into the north coast and northern interior Saturday to give mainly sunny skies.

Another Major Storm Sweeps across Britain

LONDON (AP) — Heavy rain, sleet and snow swept across northeast England on Thursday, leaving some areas under 1.2 metres of water and blocking major highways.

The deluge dumped nearly an average month's rainfall on the city of Newcastle in 24 hours, said the local weather centre, which measured four centimetres of rain by 9 a.m. Thursday.

Thirty people were evacuated in Lanchester, Durham County, from a flooded home for the elderly and were given refuge in a local hospital.

The main street in the town of Chester-le-Street was under 1.2 metres of water. "It's the worst weather I have ever known," said Peter Trietline, a health official there.

Police said snow plows were called out to clear major roads in the higher elevations, and rescue teams launched dinghies to evacuate families from flooded low-lying districts.

A flood alert was posted at the fishing port of North Shields, where the quay was under 1.2 metres of water Thursday morning.

Britain has had its the worst winter weather in 16 years, and weathermen said there was still no sign of spring.

CN Rail Picketed

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 1,000 Canadian National Railways workers were off the job today after members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers set up 24-hour information pickets here and in Kamloops.

The union members were protesting a three-year contract between the national union and CP Rail and CN.

They say they want a one-year contract and that the tentative agreement does not provide for regional interests.

CATTLE

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. of 1,050 head at the Calgary public stockyards were mostly feeder cattle and stock calves. Too few slaughter cattle on offer early to establish trends. Heavy receipts of feeder cattle met a moderate demand at lower prices. Good feeder steers sold $3 lower while good feeder heifers sold $5 lower. Feeder cows traded steady to a good local demand. Good stock steer calves sold $4 lower and good stock heifer calves sold $5 lower.

LONDON

LONDON (CP) — Closing stock quotations Friday in new pence unless pounds are indicated, x-indicates that quotations includes dollar premium based on latest conversion rate, 0.8117.

ANNOUNCEMENT
GROUSE NEST RESORTS LTD. announces that Laurel Point Properties Ltd. of Vancouver, B.C. — consequent to its foreclosure action in a defaulted first mortgage — has taken possession as well as become owner of the property known as GROUSE NEST RESORT. This property located on the Sooke basin near Victoria, B.C. consists of 572 acres in part, commercially zoned, approximately 10,000 feet of waterfront and substantial improvements. These assets which are estimated at about six million dollars were awarded to Laurel Properties Ltd. in lieu of the repayment of a debt presently accrued to a sum of less than $2,500,000. The main respondents in the foreclosure proceedings in question are herewith informing whomsoever it may concern of their intentions to re-open the foreclosure action within the time limitation granted by law and take back this valuable property after re-payment of the indebtedness to the new owner (owners).

ACTRA Awards Presentation Airs Wednesday

The 8th annual ACTRA Awards will be telecast from Toronto Wednesday, April 4 on CBC-TV.

Established in 1971 as a salute to excellence in Canada's radio and television industries, the two-hour gala presentation will be seen live on channels 2 and 6 at 9 p.m.

The Association of Canadian Television and Radio Artists' 1979 Awards ceremonies will be hosted for the second consecutive year by Gordon Pinsent, accomplished actor-author, and star of the CBC-TV series A Gift to Last which he created. His debut as ACTRA host last year was warmly received by critics and viewers alike, prompting Bruce Kirkland to write in his Toronto Star review that Pinsent exemplified "the new look" at the ACTRA Awards, being "amusing and appropriate, with flash".

Five new categories will be featured in the Awards line-up this year: Best Acting Performance in a Continuing TV Role; Best Host—Television; Best Host—Radio; Best Variety Writer—TV; Best Variety Writer—Radio.

Sixteen other categories include the Gordon Sinclair Award for outspoken opinions and integrity in broadcasting; the Earle Grey Award for best acting performance in a TV leading role, the Foster Hewitt Award for excellence in sportcasting, and the Andrew Allan Award for best acting performance in radio.

Initial nominations received from ACTRA branches across the country are already announced; they will be narrowed down to three for each category (there are 21 categories in all) in a Final Nominations list to be issued by ACTRA mid-March.

Presenters at the 1979 ACTRA Awards event on April 1 will include Don Harron, Gordon Sinclair, Jean Gascon, Marilyn Lighthouse, Betty Kennedy, Jan Rubes, Lloyd Robertson, David Suzuki, Pierre Burton. Barbara Hamilton, Karen Kain, George Reed and Fred Davis.

Don Harron will present the radio awards, contained in a segment of the program honoring that medium. Fred Davis will continue his tradition of presenting the John Drainie Award for Distinguished Contribution to Broadcasting, a special award made by a panel of judges who are previous recipients.

Entertainment for the 1979 ACTRA Awards and its telecast will feature an opening production number, a lighthearted look at television, in which "King of Kensington" himself (Al Waxman) will make singing debut.

Cherrill and Robbie Rae, the singing duo of a 1978 CBC-TV summer series, and stars of a new variety show to be seen regularly on the same network next season, will perform.

In the tribute to radio, CBC's popular comic team The Royal Canadian Air Farce will be starred.

Canadian Film Story

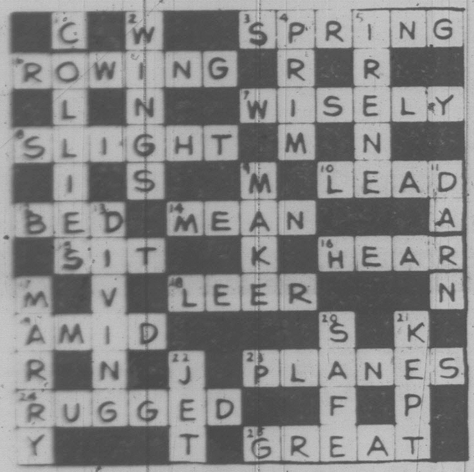
John Grierson, founder of the National Film Board of Canada, will be profiled in a documentary, Tueday, April 3, at 9:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

Titled Has Anybody Here Seen Canada? the documentary traces the history of filmmaking in Canada from 1939 to 1953.

The NFB is credited with having been instrumental in the creation of Canada's film industry. The board was established in 1939 as a propaganda tool in Canada's war effort.

—PAYOFF PUZZLE—

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS

3. SPRING not sprint. When you sprint into shallow water, there is hardly a single distinct "shock" of entry, as when you SPRING into deep.

6. ROWING not mowing or sowing. One readily imagines an outdoor athletic or keep-fit "type" making a healthy habit of early-morning ROWING. Against mowing or sowing (which are unsuitably specific anyway) a farmer doesn't work in the early morning because he is the "type" to do so; it's his job.

7. WISELY not widely. The fact that views are popular (i.e. widely held) doesn't really endorse them as sound. "WISELY" is better in this respect.

12. BED not red. The clue seems to suggest that some sort of excuse, or special circumstance, is required before one is likely to photograph a girl in "this."

15. SIT not sip. It is indeed very reasonable to SIT and enjoy a drink; but, if you are thirsty and really want to enjoy the drink, there is no reason to restrict yourself to sips.

16. HEAR not wear. If one attended such gatherings, one certainly might HEAR things that would be accounted strange by normal reckoning; but one might not be disposed to wear anything outlandish oneself. (It all depends who "one" is.)

18. LEER not jeer. It is a "shy" girl, more particularly who could be discomfited by a mere LEER.

23. PLANES not planet. The clue tends to assume that the expert would not be totally stumped; it is an understatement in the case of a planet, about which many questions simply do not have known answers.

24. RUGGED not ragged. A "conventional" businessman cannot possibly have a ragged appearance, and is "hardly likely" to have a RUGGED appearance.

25. GREAT not treat. It is certainly "GREAT," in the ordinary sense of fine, enjoyable, etc., but it is not necessarily a "treat" (this implying a special or unusual privilege).

CLUES DOWN

1. COLLIES not coolies. Aptly, COLLIES are a distinct breed. On the other hand, there is nothing directly to show that a group of oriental looking persons, depicted in themselves, are in fact coolies; so, arguably, it may be difficult for the artist "clearly" to show that they are coolies.

2. WINGS not kings. One may reasonably tend to think of kings as figureheads not wielding real power, but WINGS, normally used for flight, are generally thought of as powerful.

4. PRIM not prig. The clue suits that which a girl might be, knowingly or from choice (it being "open to her"), in which respect "prig" is distinctly less apt.

9. MAKE not take. it's difficult to see how there can be any harm in MAKING a satisfactory or acceptable offer; but to take such an offer when there may be a better one is perhaps not so good.

11. DARN not dart. you wouldn't expect such a girl to make a "really good job" of a DARN, or even to attempt a dart (since she is evidently not the type who actually makes clothes).

13. DIVING not dining. Stars may be used to stares when they are out at restaurants, etc., but it is hardly a question of being "watched dining" as the performances of DIVING competitors are watched.

20. SAFE not sane. SAFE links up more immediately with the idea of avoiding accusation or trouble.

Soap Opera Scene

'As the World Turns' 23

By JOHN GOUDAS

On April 2, 1956, As the World Turns began spinning out yarns about the inhabitants of Oakdale; and now, 23 years later, it is still one of the top soap operas on the air.

Don McLaughlin and Helen Wagner, who portray Chris and Nancy Hughes, have been with the soap since the beginning; and, after so many milestones, this one is just another in the long list of aniversaries.

Chris and Nancy have seen their family grow up and go through marriage, divorce, childbirth, traumas, trials, unhappiness, sorrow, sickness, death, breakdowns and spurts of euphoria.

Helen Wagner with Don MacLaughlin

As the grand old man of the soap, Don MacLaughlin believes he has explored himself more than his character as he has aged. Playing a good man, the stalwart andstable head of the Hughes clan for so many years may not have afforded Don many opportunities to chew up the scenery, but he has enjoyed being the sanity factor in the town (and on the show).

"Helen and I always played the normal couple with the normal goals," said MacLaughlin. "The role of Nancy is and was a bastion of wifeliness. Not that she didn't have a strong will, but she always did what was best for the family. Helen Wagner has impeccable taste as an actress and a good dealof the show's success is really her doing. She's tough on me at times, almost like a real wife would be. She demands that everyone be prepared when he or she is in a scene with her and she's right."

Asked about the debut of the soap, MacLaughlin said, "The only thing I can recall about the first episode of 'World' was everyone's nervousness.

"The fact that TV was live in those days also added to the terror of acting in the new medium. There were many adjustments to be made.

"However, it certainly was exciting, too. After all, it's always more thrilling to walk the tightrope across a canyon than ride across in safety on a bridge."

Speculating on the reasons why soap operas, and "As the World Turns" in particular, have been so popular with viewers through the years, Don said, "It's like looking over the transom of the house next door. Actually, you get to know your TV neighbors better than your real ones."

PLOT PORTENTS. Why is Laura so stubborn, refusing medical attention on "Days of Our Lives"? Laura, being unreasonable, means danger ahead. Wily Stephanie must use all her resources to outsmart the security check at Anderson Manufacturing, or her game is up! Even her friend David hasn't a clue as to what makes Stephanie tick, and it's a good thing, too. Julie is obsessed by a desire to become pregnant, but Doug shies away from the subject.

Pregnancy also becomes a preoccupation of Jill's on "The Young and the Restless," although she's getting little help from her new hubby, Stuart. Who's next on your list, Jill? Snapper and Chris actually seem happy helping neglected old people, a new tack on this youth-oriented show. New grandmother Vanessa, however is a tough nut to crack as she spreads venom among her young. Somehow her daughter-in-law Lorie manages to ignore Vanessa's attacks. Maybe it's spring, or has Lorie grown up? In any case, husband Lance must be blind since he continues to pay little attention to Vanessa's attempts to break up the marriage.

Bob Reid's attempts at romance are getting undermined by a friend on Ryan's Hope. Rae has begun some questionable political machinations while Mary's career has taken a turn for the better. And it looks as though Tom and Faith might make another go of their marriage.

Dorian's plans to replace Larry have taken a setback on One Life to Live, but she's not about to give up. Gwen has become a pest to almost everyone except Dr. Kipling, while Brad's gambling difficulties may have dire consequences for other people in his life. And a voice from the past has Karen terribly unnerved.

Billy Clyde is behind bars on All My Children. Devon is making plans to keep Bonnie, her baby, while grandma Shephard has a serious conversation with her own young fiance. There will be a new face in Pine Valley with Betsy Kennicott coming to town and stirring things up.

Logan is completely at odds on The Edge of Night: torn between two lovers and having put himself in a compromising position before Wade's death, it all comes to a boiling point. While on the romantic scene, Margo and Elliot seem to be heading for more than a casual business arrangement.

CHANNEL CHATTER. If the face of veteran actor William Robertson, age 71, who plays Travis' grandfather, General Tourneur, in Search for Tomorrow, is familiar to viewers, that shouldn't be surprising. Robertson's list of acting credits goes back to the early '30s. And he's still going strong . . .

Deborah Hobart is the new girl in town on As the World Turns. She plays gorgeous Dana Woodward, who is a friend of Penny's from London. It looks as if she might be the newest love interest for Dr. Bob Hughes. Most of Deborah's credits are musical and she's had 17 years of ballet. She also won the beauty title of Miss Georgia-World (1974), and was a finalist in the Miss World-U.S.A. (1974-75) contest.

TV MAILBAG

BRIDGING A GAP — I sure need your help. My father-in-law and I have had a longtime disagreement over Jeff and Beau Bridges. I say it was Beau who starred with Clint Eastwood in Thunderbolt and White Lightning. He says it was Jeff. Can you "bridge" this argument once and for all? — Judy Mackey, Snyder, Texas.

You'll need more than my help two win this argument. First off, the movie was Thunderbolt and Lightfoot. Second, I'm afraid father-in-law knows best. It was baby brother Jeff.

THE THING — A classic of sorts in science fiction is the movie The Thing. The monster in the movie is the subject of some debate in my household. One side claims that James Arness played the monster, or the "thing." The other side claims that Arness is in the picture, but merely played the pilot, perhaps the starring role. Please identify the major cast members. — Chris Clueck, Nashua, N.H.

"The Thing (From Another World)" featured such '50s players as Margaret Sheridan, Kenneth Tobey, Robert Cornwaithe and Douglas Spencer as the assorted scientists and monster chasers. Alas, Arness played the title role — The Thing.

TRUMPETS — Could you please tell me about the great actor who portrayed Private Robert E. Lee Pruitt on NBC Novels for Television: "From Here to Eternity?" Has he done any other acting? Where can I write him? — C. McGlynn, Rochester, N.Y.

Steve Railsback played Pruitt, the role created by Montgonery Clift. Railsback first came to the attention of TV viewers in his vivid portrayal of convicted mass-murderer Charles Manson in the TV film, Helter Skelter. He is not under contract to any studio at the moment, but you can try in care of the Screen Actors Guild, 7750 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood, CA. 90046. Ask them to forward it.

BAD VIDEO — I've been very disappointed since Compulsion, the story about Leopold and Loeb, was supposed to be on TV. Instead the station aired that stupid Sheriff of Fractured Jaw. I am mainly interested because I had the original book, a first edition (before a friend borrowed and never returned it). Will it be on again? — Gertrude Fallon, Venice, Calif.

Since Compulsion was made in the '50s, it has not been on the network television in some years. So, we are talking here of one of your local stations or affiliates running the film. I know this excellent movie about the '20s Chicago thrill-kill trial airs regularly in New York. I would assume it pops up now and again on the local station that planned to air it. Write them with your complaint and query.

FAVES RAVES — I'm so glad to have an address where I can write to express my appreciation for the program Paper Chase. It is interesting and very well acted, and a cut above many programs. I also enjoy Family and Lou Grant. — Miriam B. Holmes, Ocean Springs, Miss.

I realize you didn't ask a question, but just thought I'd let you know that Paper Chase is fighting a losing battle to stay on the air, despite CBS's efforts to find it a good time slot. Unless more people tune in, the network will tune out next season.

NO GREEN STAMPS — Why is Starsky and Hutch off the air? They are so good, I've never missed a show. My husband also likes it very much. Is David Soul going to be in any more TV shows? — Mrs. Harvey Kellum, Jacksonville, N.C.

"S and H" are, at the moment, only temporarily off the air. The series was preempted for six week for The Ropers and 12 Queens Blvd. There are still a few new Starsky and Hutch episodes, which will air later this spring. After that, all indications point to the end of the road.

Thanks For Waiting!

Mexican Dancing

Stepping out, Channel 9's weekly guide to the Northwest entertainment scene, features the Gran Ballet Folklorico de Mexico, Thursday, April 5, at 7:30 p.m. This special performance of the dance group will be taped in Red Square at the University of Washington.

Described as a "Spectacular whirlwind of color, music, gorgeous girls and lithe heel-clicking men," the Gran Folklorico received a 10-minute standing ovation during its recent appearance at the John F. Kennedy Centre for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C. The compay of thirty five dancers, singers, mariachis, marimba and "jarochos" musicians won the First Prize at the World Folklore Festival in Yugoslavia. Following that performance, the group was given official recognition by the Department of Culture of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Mexico as a "representative of authentic folklore and culture of Mexico."

The company was founded by Theo Shanab, now its General Director: Shanab is one of the leading exponents of the traditional and authentic Folklorico culture. Choreographer for the group is Lino Ortega, while its principle dancer is Jorge Tyller, Mexico's foremost "deer-dancer" who performed for King Juan Carlos of Spain.

PLAN Nº 75-1553

Bungalow with Rear View Lot

A front courtyard and rain-sheltered entrance highlight the pleasing exterior of this three bedroom, full basement bungalow, which is well-suited to the sloping rear view lot.

The large entrance foyer leads forward and down on one riser to the dramatic sunken living room, which features a floor-to-ceiling brick fireplace, flanked by two sliding glass doors leading onto the rear balcony.

The well-planned U-shaped kitchen, large breakfast nook, dining room and open-air patio with easy access from the kitchen, combine to make this home ideal for the family which entertains a great deal. Sliding glass doors separate the kitchen and dining room which, combined with the large nook, provides for easy separartion of casual, family and formal dining. The open-air patio encourages outdoor dining in fine weather.

All bedrooms are grouped around the central bathroom and away from the entertaining area. The master bedroom has a three piece ensuite bath with an elevated tub.

A double car garage with space for a workshop, full basement for future development, and the practical layout of this design makes it an ideal choice for town or country.

Plans for design No. 75-1553 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $70, for the first set and $10, for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $100, and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $125.

Whichever method you choose, please include $1 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add five sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs Magazine, Series 38, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 350 quality home-plans of every type. Available for $2 ($2 plus 50 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, c/o Victoria Press, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Y 1R2.

John Hearn's Collectibles

Collecting phantoms sounds like a hobby for psychic researchers but they are also of interest to philatelists — along with Cinderellas and fantasies.

I've just been browsing through some books on stamp collecting and once again I am persuaded that the process of collecting is far more interesting than the objects themselves. Get serious almost any collectible and you enter a world of esoteric knowledge which enriches the whole subject — and possibly enriches the collector himself.

Scott's Standard Postage Stamp Catalogue (1978) is a mine of such information. For example:

"Cinderella, a catchall term used by collector's of phantoms, fantasies, bogus items, municipal issues, exhibition seals, poster stamps, etc." In other words, any stamps which were not issued by a national government for postal purposes.

A fantasy is a stamp purportedly issued by some authority which never actually existed. Scott's quotes such imaginary countries as the Kingdom of Sedang and the Principality of Trinidad.

On the other hand, if the place does exist and might conceivably have issued the stamp it is known as a bogus — the Mormon stamp of Utah, for instance; plausible but completely fake. Both fantasies and boguses are sometimes called phantoms and are very collectible.

Then there is the fine difference between postal forgeries and philatelic forgeries. The former are made to pass as currently valid stamps and made to defraud the issuing government. Philatelic forgeries are made to defraud collectors. Counterfeit stamps were more common in the 19th century when collectors were more gullible tham they are today and forgers were able to get away with quite clumsy work. Scott's claims that modern methods make it virtually impossible to pass undetectable fake but given Hearn's First Law of Collecting — namely that the moment it becomes profitable to reproduce an item, it will be reproduced — the collector should proceed with great caution. I am sure it would be extremely difficult to fake a convincing 3P Canada Postage Beaver (1851) but since it lists at $6,000 it would obviously worth a great deal of trouble to get it right.

Scott's differentiates between counterfeits and fakes. The latter are genuine stamps which have been tampered with — as opposed to complete fabrications. They speak of 30,000 varieties of fakes known as far back as the 1950s and the number has not inclined since then.

Stamps can be chemically treated to change the color to one of a higher value. Common stamps can be transformed into rarer specimens by simply adding or removing a few tiny dots or lines. Fake watermarks can be created, silk threads inserted and regumming is commonplace. Perforations can be added or eliminated according to whatever enhances the value. Overprints, surcharges and cancellations are other common ways to build spurious value into old but plentiful stamps.

Scott's Standard Postage Stamp Catalogue is the name of the book. It comes in four volumes of about 800 pages apiece and is a must for the serious collector. For the less serious it provides fascinating reading for a couple of hours in your local reference library.

Readers letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, R.R. #1, Lowbanks, Ont., N0A 1K0.

BEFORE CBC-TV'S Marketplace goes into recess for the summer months, Joan Watson and Bill Paul will have some information for consumers on the 1980 line of cars. Marketplace, seen Sundays at 10 p.m., will be visiting the Consumers Reports test Centre in Connecticut which buys, tests and evaluates about 35 new cars each year. Their reports place an emphasis on fuel economy, safety, overall comfort and convenience. Marketplace has its story on the 1980 models scheduled for April 1.

In one of the "Moffat" books, by children's writer Eleanor Estes, there's a character who runs around asking people how their parents met. She's making a collection of "first meeting" stories, the stranger the better. None of the stories she collects is an improvement on her own, which explains that her father met her mother when he knocked her over while barrelling his way down an "up" escalator. (He stopped to apologize and dust her off, and immediately forgot where he was going. At least I think that's what happened. It's a long time since I read a Moffat book.

A more typical story would be one like my own. I met my husband playing ping pong. (You can learn a lot about a person playing ping pong with him, believe it or not.) Over the years we've tried other games, as married couples will; so far our only disaster has been chess.

Chess, I find, requires an instinct for the jugular that clashes with the conjugal. The thing that really put a full stop to our chess period, though, was the time I distinctly heard my brain snap. I was home alone, poring over the chessboard and an instruction book with a white-hot determination not to let that &%!=*& beat me again, when suddenly there was this snapping noise somewhere inside my head. It sounded like a wire shorting, or maybe even snapping as a result of overload and accumulated rust. It startled me so much I closed the book, never opened it again, and told my husband I'd prefer to take up something less dangerous, like sky-diving.

All of which explains why I find myself unable to appreciate an important aspect of Phyllis Gotlieb's science fiction novel, O Master Caliban!, in which close to a third of the action takes place on a chessboard. A scientist and his double play what seems like a very good game. There's even an appendix listing their moves, which were "researched and created" for the novel by Gotleib's computer-scientist husband.

If their game is as interesting as it looks, O Master Caliban! will be a must-read for chess players. The rest of us will have to make do with the remainder of the story. It's a good read, a sort of Wizard of Oz of interplanetary space which deserves better than its ugly packaging by Seal Books (O Master Caliban! first appeared hardbound in 1976; this edition is a reprint.)

The action takes place on Barrazan V, an inhospitable planet with a terrible climate which is used by the "Galactic Federation" as an experimental biological station. In charge is — or was — biologist Edvalg Dahlgren, whose empire included hundreds of human scientists and "a thousand ergs", monster machines which ended up in absolute control. Dahlgren is imprisoned in his station and forced to play chess with a machine that is outwardly an expert copy of himself. Supervising is the dreaded Erg-Queen, Mod 777.

Meanwhile, far away in the outback, Dahlgren's mutant son Sven and two furry companions rescue the accupants of a stranded spaceship. They are five children aged 10 to 17; one of them just happens to be a mechanical genius. All eight set out for the biological station to rescue Dahlgren and do battle with the ergs. (They follow the green, blue, orange and yellow brick roads.) Their story is interspersed with the chess game in a narrative that's a bit on the mechanical side itself.

O Master Caliban! is best read in one or two sittings, to allow as little time as possible for the outside world to impinge on Gotlieb's cleverly built-up illusions. Unlike many science-fiction writers, she shows no interest in saving the world or lecturing mankind on its follies. The values she champions are love and loyalty among individuals; mercifully, she is short on moralizing and long on entertainment and characterization.

Some of her ideas are charmingly comic. Witness Clothier, a friendly erg with a passion for fashion. "What is your favorite color?" it whispers to one of the children as it whisks him through shadowy corridors and pauses to flatten a hostile erg, commenting, "A clumsy thing like that is no match for a good sewing machine."

The book's main weakness is the predictablity of the plot. But it's still a good read for a rainy day, when your chess partner's down with a cold.

FOWLES . . . a treasure of spindrift prose

Two Journies: In Search of A Family, And Islands

By ANTHONY JENKINS

When the playwright, Christopher Fry, was asked to write a book about his childhood in the First World War, he thought that, while such memories might hold a certain charm, they would not provide the materials for an entire book. Accordingly, he set out to probe "the network of events and characters out of which I had emerged."

That search led him back to 1849, the year that Emma Fry, his maternal grandmother, met her future husband, the feckless Rowland Hammond. And in the pages that follow he tries to arrive at the reality behind their characters and of their many children, most of whom were to end their lives on the opposite side of the globe. He listens for their voices among scraps of letters and in their diaries in order to give dimension to the faces in the brown photographs of the family album.

His mother's side of the family were vigorous and articulate. His father's side remain in shadow; they left little trace of themselves despite the fact they scarcely moved from the district they had lived in for three generations. That contrast does much to explain why Fry chose his pen-name "by a kind of right" from that part of his family whose history goes back to a few square miles of medieval Somerset.

In unravelling the personalities of his mother's brothers and sisters, Fry is also in quest of himself and of the way he takes his place among the family group, hence the title of his book. When he was a child, his mother used occasionally to lament out loud about the way her life would have been better had she married someone other than his father:

"It set me wondering where, then, should I have been, or not here at all? . . . Would the consciousness of being alive be mine (though a different me) if she married someone else? Was it only because she had married my father that I was aware of being alive. . . ?"

Despite this subjective approach, Fry's role throughout most of his book is one of neutral historian. He is content to bring together as much as he can of the family's day-to-day lives and, in those letters which remain, is able to find moments of drama from the past.

Uncle Hal is perhaps the most vivid and accessible. At 17 he set off for Canada, tried to scratch a living on farms out West, and finally joined the Mounties: "Regina, the coming capital of the N.W.T., consists of two streets of wooden erections and that's all. I went down to Church last Sunday in full dress, spurs clanking, gauntlets flashing, buttons gleaming, 'all there' . . . It is the softest job I have struck since I struck the country, and have fully reconciled myself for the five years. . . ."

Hal fought at Duck Lake and was paid $5 by the Prince Albert Times for an eye-witness sketch. After his five years' service, he received a grant of land which he swapped for a wad of tobacco and sailed for Australia where two of his brothers then were.

His letters are breezy and, as one might expect, not very detailed, but they offer a first-hand view of pioneer life. Hal's casual remarks about walking miles through snow to the nearest homestead, without food or topcoat, make him a figure out of Henty or Ballantyne.

But the book's chief "character" is really Aunt Ada, who spent most of her life distraught on her sofa, wracked by headaches and psychosomatic pains. Her journals chronicle death and a severe Christianity; she represents the other side of the Victorian persona. Unhappy and unwanted, she became part of the household after Fry's father died. On the day of her funeral, "I remember . . . feeling the strangeness of the absence, and knowing what I had never thought of before, that I was fond of Aunt A."

Once the lives of these aunts and uncles begin to touch Fry's boyhood memory, the book takes life. Before that, one misses that personal view. Although each life has been lovingly researched, it is in the last chapters that events come live off the page to create a moving mood-piece.

John Fowles' Islands is all mood, a personal essay that begins on the Scillies off the West of England and takes us to the mythic roots of "islandness."

Fay Godwin's black and white photographs which accompany the text are also mood-pieces. Cloud and light, the texture of bark, stone and lichens, the "found" sculptures of seawrack on a beach, her pictures pierce to the essence of things.

They create an atmosphere around which Fowles weaves his poetic word-pictures. I don't mean to suggest that his prose is full of purple passages. Through his clean, muscled sentences, he thinks poetically "across frontiers and consecrated limits."

For him, islands turn man in towards the maze of himself, away from "verifiable facts, like money, time, personal pleasure, established knowledge." His book, too, leaps from Celtic megaliths on the Scillies to the vexed Bermudas, and always "to the roots of something beyond one's personal descent."

Unconcerned with verifiable fact, Fowles lingers on the sea-sounds of the letters "s" and "l", the sinister "sk", the connections between sea-girt rocks and the dark forest. His ideas thread together like islands in an archipelago; they may not be capable of proof, but they have the stamp of truth: "I know the maze on St. Agnes was first built . . . by a Phoenician sailor . . . and know equally well that no serious archeologist would for a moment support such a hypothesis."

Each page contains something to linger over. Fowles plays with the correspondances between seals and the siren, or with his conviction that "Homer" was a woman and that Shakespeare's Tempest is about the dependence of the artist upon the receptivity of his audience

One's first step on an island begins a journey to what one is. "Insula", the island, insulated from the normal in a lotus land or, according to puritan theory, in a holding-place, a Crusoe-like arena of self-criticism. Islands, for Fowles, prove to be the jumping-off point for a labyrinth of ideas which "strip and dissolve the crud of our pretensions and cultural accretions."

Like a piece of driftwood, the book may appear inconsequential. But others will find in it a treasure, a shape-shifter.

A Relentless Evocation Of One Man's Egotism

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

William Dubin, the biographer, fifty-six, stands on the corner where his age and accomplishment meet, and sees: past lives done (his Thoreau won the Medal of Freedom from President Johnson, whose own life Dubin politely declines to write), a new life of D. H. Lawrence about to begin. Dubin's sense of mortality and passion is painfully aroused as he contemplates his past and future lives, his present life. And other lives: there is a wife, there are children and friends, there is, soon enough, a young lover.

And there is, of course, William Dubin — there is always Dubin. Seldom in recent fiction has the claustrophobia of consciousness been so relentlessly rendered as it is in Bernard Malamud's latest novel.

And seldom, if ever, has such an unpleasant character as William Dubin been able to retain our interest for so long. If we do not love him after being locked so tightly inside his skull, the fault may be entirely ours, for Malamud hides nothing here. Neither does Dubin.

Dubin, you must understand, is an egotist. A simple enough man, really, and one whose relations with others depend entirely on what use they can be to him.

Dubin's wife, of course, is the main victim of this game.

Being a victim, however, doesn't make Kitty Dubin a heroine: she has enough unpleasant qualities of her own that disqualify her for that role. She is, in fact, much like William: tied to her awareness of mortality and passion, slave to rituals that promise escape from her fate.

". . . (Dubin) felt he had honed his character on her," Malamud writes. "In all she had helped stabilize and enlarge his life; but he was not so sure . . . that he had done the same for her . . ."

And he hasn't, of course. What he's done for Kitty is precisely — nothing. If that's putting it rather too bleakly, it should be noted that Dubin has at least allowed his wife's neurotic fancies full play, and even adopted a protective attitude towards her so her bubbles wouldn't burst.

Here's how Dubin rationalizes his carelessness as he muses about the affair he is having:

"Kitty was vulnerable, why upset her? He had lied to protect her."

With friends like that, who needs enemies? And Dubin's lies, of course, are eventually confessed. The long breakup of frozen years begins.

The imagery of the natural world is apt to characterize Dubin's relationship with Kitty because Malamud writes so brilliantly in this novel of the New York countryside these people live in. Through eight seasons of change, land and climate become like another character in the story, and though such a device can in lesser hands become a simplistic, almost farcical way of avoiding the provision of depth to the humans in the environment, Malamud's focus on Dubin's perspective reveals yet another facet of the biographer's character.

Thus other people, too, are means by which Dubin attempts to manifest his own personality. They are in an essential way his lives, but Malamud has managed wonderfully to allow the other characters here to suggest themselves far more effectively than Dubin himself could ever do. Tantalizing glimpses of lives untainted by the biographer's grip emerge; depths are suggested that speak of men and women locked in circles as passionate and mortal as Dubin's own, an entire world is created with incident and dialogue whose import, while it may escape the notice of Dubin (or is noticed only for the purposes of his own fate) cannot fail to interest the reader. Malamud's intelligence here: a book based merely on Dubin would probably fail to hold even the most dedicated reader for the length of the book. It's the others, at least as much as Dubin, who amplify the world for us.

It becomes obvious, though, as the impressions of these other characters filter in and take on meaning alongside the biographer's biography, that each and every one of them would echo in their own way Dubin's warning to himself as he contemplates his jilting by the young woman he'd hoped would restore him:

"It's one thing for a man not to know, not to have learned; it's another not to be able to live by what one does know."

Dubin, of course, has learned very little; and neither have the others. The only people in this novel who have learned, and are trying to live by what they have learned are Dubin's two children, Maud and Gerry. Their hesitant, painful struggle to escape the net of their father's life provides the only indication that Dubin's lives may eventually reach an end — are, in fact, ending.

Applaud the children, then, and wish them well on their journey!

The Groucho File: Help for an Unfunny Time

By COLMAN McCARTHY

When friends come to Washington and want to unpinch their nerves with some relaxed sightseeing I direct them to one of the city's greatest vistas — the shelf of the Library of Congress that holds the letters of Groucho Marx.

Groucho? people ask. He's in the Library of Congress? What has Washington come to?

In this case, it has come to its senses. The Groucho file sparkles with the written wit of a comedian who used four mediums — films, stage, radio and television — to humor and enchant us for more than 60 years. The library preserves the letters — Groucho corresponded with everyone from T.S. Eliot to his brother Gummo — with the same care with which many of us still recall the times a Marx brothers film or a Groucho radio show eased our woes.

Woes is an apt term, because Groucho had a cavernous share of these himself. Throughout Hector Arce's biograhy — it is well-researched, candid and offers a bracing mix of commentary, facts and anecdotes — so many torments are either endured by Groucho or inflicted on others by him that it is a wonder he ever came to have a funny thought at all. His three marriages were tangles of bitterness and confusion. He fought with his children. He bedded down with countless women but could never bring himself to trust any of them. He wouldn't deride guests on his quiz show but he could devastate a close friend or relative with a mean aside. He couldn't admit that he was growing old. He had millions of dollars, but was often stingy. He loathed strangers who recognized him on the street and came up to tell him a joke.

"Throughout his life," Arce writes, "Groucho's behavioral pattern was to give the impression he cared too little when in actuality he may have cared too much. It may have been a defence against inevitable rejection, but his often brutal, inexcusable behavior would inexorably drive the people he most cared about away."

MARX . . . always 'on'

For all his troubles, he was able to use them for laughs. The man with the famous leer wrote to Abe Burrows about his declining passions: "My sex life is negligible. The only time I get real excited about a dame is when I am flying through the air and . . . watch the hostesses wiggle their ways up and down the aisles. Since there's nothing more remote sexually than a hostess on an airliner (at least while she's on the plane), I always arrive at LaGuardia lustful and eager for a call-girl. However this condition soon disappears as the Seconal taken 12 hours earlier begins taking effect."

As pained and pain-causing as his subject may have been, Arce writes of him with sympathy. In the course of his work with Groucho, Arce says that he came "to look on this endearing old man as my surrogate father." With a carping book already out on Marx by son Arthur Marx, Arce believed that a legend deserved something better. He was around Groucho only during the last part of his life, when Marx was victimized by legal squabbles, a gossipy and often yelling household of attending nurses and confidants, and rapidly fading mental powers. But it was enough time to gain Groucho's confidence, as well as access to his memories and opinions.

Poignantly, Arce relates a moment in early 1977 when he praised Groucho for being a living legend. "It's an empty phrase," Marx replied. "It means nothing. I'm pleased, but I don't put up an American flag. My responsibility to the audience is to give as good a show as I can. I've been a star for 50 years. I think I can see why. I find myself funny. I never think I could have done it better. I always did it as well as I could at the time. I see a lot of comedians today on television that are good. But these are not funny times we're living in."

That Groucho, who had deep reserves of contempt for countless people and institutions that deserved it, would have charitable feelings about his fellow funnymen is one of many surprises that Arce supplies. If anything, Groucho well knew that so-called comedians like Bob Hope or Johnny Carson are little more than packaged products dependent on gag writers or stooges and who are decidedly humorless offstage. Groucho was always on, no matter the scene. When someone came up to him one evening and said, "I'm a fan," Groucho replied, "Good, this joint is a hot place. I need a fan." As an old man in his sickbed, he told his nurse, "You're cute but it's too late." She asked. "Too late for what?" Groucho: "For you."

James Agee, who wrote that he could think of no comedian "who has given me greater pleasure," believed Groucho to be "the funniest satirist of the century." More than an authorized biography is needed to explore the genius for comedy that statement suggests, but Arce comes close enough for it to be unarguable.

Teaching us about wolves — And more about ourselves

No animal has been more widely written about than the wolf and yet none remains more misunderstood or mysterious. The reason for this, I think, is that over the centuries man has been so schooled into believing the wolf to be evil incarnate that he finds it difficult to accept any evidence that does not support this belief. The fact that the belief has no basis in fact doesn't matter; man had to find a scapegoat for his own base nature, and the choice fell on the wolf — and this maligned creature has been unjustly paying for it for more than 2,000 years.

When Chaucer wrote of "the devil's wolves that strangle the sheep of Jesus Christ," he was reflecting the Christian belief that wolves do the Devil's work. And when Byron wrote that "the Assyrian came down like a wolf on the fold" his meaning was crystal clear. And in writing of German wolf-packs prowling the North Atlantic, war correspondents clearly conveyed the Allied perception of the Third Reich as a cruel and greedy creature preying on Europe.

When people were told that Adolf Hitler's military retreat in eastern Prussia was called The Wolf Lair, they found it apt, and, had they known, they would also have appreciated that the name Adolf is a contraction of Edelwolf, the noble wolf.

We humans use such symbols and metaphors to interpret the universe to ourselves, and the wolf serves a triple purpose. The mind dotes on distinctions between good and evil, and the wolf is a sometime symbol of evil. He is also a warrior symbol and we are concerned with our own courage and nobility. And of course the wolf's image is also a terrifying one, and we like to frighten ourselves.

We don't think of these things consciously, but the imagery is deeply embedded in the subconscious and is readily available. An ancient image, that of the benevolent wolf-mother, is found in the legends of Romulus and Remus and other wolf-children. Negative feelings are represented by the deaths of those taken for werewolves and burned alive in the Middle Ages.

Sexual imagery is equally old and enduring. In Latin the word lupa means both whore and female wolf; the modern wolf whistle is associated with predatory young men who are indiscriminately lustful.

A Universal Need

So we see the wolf as a symbol reflecting the human alternatives of instinctual urges and rational behavior, the irreconcilables, and we wish to believe that the wolf's attempt to live a rational life is constantly defeated by his urge to behave basely. Thus, the human and bestial natures. And this explains the attraction of stories about wolves, such as those written by Jack London. Even had it been known that London was an insecure man unsuccessfully battling homosexual urges, it wouldn't have detracted from his popularity as a writer because he was appealing to a universal and hidden need.

Many writers, particularly those with scientific backgrounds, have sought to change the wolf's image, but none has had any lasting impact. I think that the reason for this is that whether they stick to facts, as people like L. David Mech and Adolph Murie do, or fictionalize, like Farley Mowat did in Never Cry Wolf, they fail to take into account the subconscious, firmly-rooted backlog of prejudice.

Now, at long last, a writer has corrected this oversight. In Of Wolves and Men, Barry Holstun Lopez provides us not only with a portrait of the wolf as himself but also with a comprehensive background of myth, legend and religious persecution which, taken together, explain our acceptance of falsities and our unthinking, uncaring attitude toward a wise and noble creature that is now an endangered species.

Man's scapegoat for 2,000 years?

Lopez has organized his book with great subtlety, obviously realizing that to make readers feel guilty too soon is the quickest way to alienate them. He opens with a description of the wolf, its social structure and communication, its territory and hunting techniques. This is an animal as seen by the scientist and as defined by his data, and is not the way most people, including Lopez, sees the creature.

Next, he shows the animal as seen by the Inuit, whose powers of observation closely resemble the wolf's. He sees an animal much like himself — a hunter and provider. From there, we view the animal through the eyes of North American Indians who see the wolf as a spiritual symbol, an animal who lives in a fashion that makes for strength in an individual and a tribe.

Having lulled his readers, by beautiful writing and poetic vision, into accepting the challenge to read on, Lopez now delivers his punch by focussing on the murderous and barbarous actions of the wolf killer who justified the unjustifiable by claiming that the wolf was an irrational, frenzied predator that must be annihilated — the same type of clamor for justification now being emitted by irrational, frenzied and greedy horse and cattle ranchers in parts of British Columbia.

There is nothing irrational or frenzied about Lopez' writing. He writes gently and with immense understanding, and allows the facts to speak for themselves. He never lectures, never moralizes; his style is a model of restraint.

At this point the reader is puzzled, not only about the wolf killer's attitudes but also his own, which, he is alarmed to discover, coincide. Isn't the wolf the embodiment of evil and as such justly feared, hated and reviled? But how do we know this? How may of us have ever seen a wolf in the wild? But that's not necessary, we reason, because we've all read the Bible, Aesop (who never existed, incidentally), Descartes, innumerable "factual" stories about werewolves, Jack London, and even Red Riding Hood, for heaven's sake.

The fact is that practically everything we have ever read about wolves is arrant nonsense, particularly the famous Russian tale (by Krilov?) of the sleigh driver's escape from a pack of wolves by throwing overboard his passengers, a bride and bridegroom.

Now, most writers would have dealt with myths, fables, legends and fairy-tales at the start and ended with a plea for an endangered species. But not Lopez. By reversing the procedure he leaves us with an earnest desire to right wrongs before it is too late by refusing any longer to make the unfortunate wolf the scapegoat for our own bestiality.

Lopez makes it abundantly clear, without ever stressing it, that the real villain of the piece is the Christian Church, and so we can quite easily shift the blame on to it without feeling guilty. The Christian Church, as Lopez points out, was historically embattled from the beginning because without an enemy to fight it had no identity. At first the enemy was the state, then came paganism, followed in turn by the infidel (the Crusades) and reformism. Then came the infamous Inquisition, beginning in the 13th century.

Devil in the Flock

Now the Church really got down to business by fixing the heretic as the clear enemy. And behind the heretic is the Devil — the wolf in the sheepfold, with both shepherds and clergy defending their flocks against the physical embodiment of the Devil, the wolf, the Devil's dog. Witches, sorcerers — and social reformers — were said to have mated with the Devil's dog and to have become werewolves. Utter nonsense was accepted by the church as irrefutable evidence, and thousands of innocents, caught up in an epidemic of hysteria, were tortured and burned at the stake.

It was no coincidence, as Lopez points out, that simultaneously there was a drive to wipe out the wolf, mounted as "the crying need of a civilized people," presumably to appease God's wrath. That drive, begun in the Middle Ages, has continued unabated and it says something for the persecuted creature's intelligence that it hasn't long since disappeared from the face of the earth.

Hopefully, people who matter will read Lopez' book and take action at this eleventh hour. If this marvelous book doesn't effect a change, nothing is likely to do so, for he sorts truth from untruth to come as close as one can to an understanding of how man creates animals in much the same fashion as he creates his gods. In this thoughtful and sensitively written book we learn a great deal about wolves but, more importantly, we come face to face with ourselves.

A Gripping War Novel

By PAUL BENNETT

Take a few isolated names and facts from the history of the Second World War, add an author's vivid imagination, and spice it with compelling characterizations and a plot with surprising twists. The result is Black Camelot, Briton Duncan Kyle's gripping Nazi-novel of The Eagle Has Landed genre.

Black Camelot is as good as, if not better than, the Jack Higgins story of an assassination attempt against Winston Churchill.

Drawing a fine line between fact and fiction, Kyle's story is about the fate of a mass of incriminating evidence against British and American people and companies, gathered by the Nazi SS and held in a secret Nazi stronghold based on King Arthur's Camelot, set up by none other than Himmler himself.

In an attempt to drive wedges between Britain, the United States and Soviet Russia early in 1945, a top SS official decides to make the documents public by devious means so their authenticity could not be denied.

The plan misfires when the SS courier hand-picked for the job discovers he's been sold out by his bosses, and takes up with an Irish journalist who tries to use them to blackmail former Nazi sympathizers in Britain.

The courier is convinced by British intelligence to lead an attack on Himmler's Black Camelot to obtain the rest of the files, which name a major American multinational corporation as a company profiteering from both sides in the war.

A battle finale which will make a poignant scene when the book becomes a movie, and an ultimate twist in the plot, are embellishments to a fine book.

BLACK CAMELOT, by Duncan Kyle. Collins. $10.95.

Hollywood Scene: Spotlight on Stars

By RUTH THOMPSON

Robert Preston credits his co-star Rosemary Harris with insight into pioneering across the American West that served both of them just swell during the filming of the miniseries, The Chisholms, now on CBS.

Rosemary said that the covered wagon trekkers needed more courage in their day than the modern astronauts who have the benefit of advance information and backup monitoring.

Certainly the Chisholms had a zest for life . . . as well as the will to live. Is their screen tale sexy? Violent? The two stars feel it is faithful to the era, especially Rosemary. She adds: "I'm glad to be playing a decent woman for a change. I know my mother-in-law in North Carolina was upset when I did the notorious George Sand. I've told her to tell her Bible group that they can see this one."

Last summer a merry movie about a newly married widow whose ghostly first spouse re-appeared on the scene drew patrons to box offices. The title then was "Donna Flor and Her Two Husbands." This season, a musical version called "Sarava" hit Broadway. And because the International Council of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences just honored with a gala dinner, the two Donna Floras finally met.

Not that they said much: Sonia Braga speaks mostly Portugese . . . Broadway's Tovah Feldshuh doesn't speak that language at all.

The mood was simpatico, however. And anyhow, there wasn't much time for dialogue. Right after the bash, Sonia winged back to Rio because she's currently starring in a TV soap called "Disco Dancers." The mood is upbeat. And it's nice to report that the heroine "Is just crazy about all things American," meaning in this case, the U.S.

Irony? Sure. Bette Davis, a "born Yankee," sold her Connecticut home two years ago and moved to sunshine land . . . California. But, alas, she came back for a visit to her old township at the same time a cold snap did. And being out of practice with treacherous terrain, she went shoosh on an icy pavement. Is she fuming? Not really. "All you can do about broken ribs is sit and wait."

She's just grateful that she had already finished "Strangers," scheduled by CBS for airing on Mother's Day. In this, the great Bette is a sour-souled mommy who is anything but open-armed at the return of her prodigal daughter (Gena Rowlands). Exults Bette: "It's the best part I've had since 'Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?' "

"You have such big eyes!" That's some compliment, yes? No . . . not when then teen-ager Sophia Loren heard her then boss Carlo Ponti (now her husband) analyze why she'd flunked eight screen tests. He added her mouth was also "too big," but there was nothing she could about that, of course. However, he did suggest that her "big nose" could be "helped" by a surgeon.

Did she or didn't she snip it Dick Cavett wanted to know during his PBS taped interview airing this week? No. Sophia would have cut Carlo from her shnozz. Later — like everybody else — Carlo acclaimed her a beauty as-is.

The subject deserves a better treatment, was the secondary theme struck by Rona Barrett on ABC's "Good Morning America," when she panned the efforts of Lily Tomlin and John Travolta in "Moment by Moment" to warm hearts (and zing up the box office, which they didn't) with their older woman" younger man screen romance.

Spectacular Kite War

Giant kites fill the air when Kite War at Hamamatsu, a prize film by Kenji Aoike, airs Saturday, March 31, at 10:30 p.m. on Channel 9. The English language version of the one-hour documentary was made entirely at KCTS-TV.

Filmed at an annual festival in Hamamatsu, where hundreds of contesting kite teams enter a friendly fray with giant kites, this Gold Medal winning film captures the joy, the wonder, the apprehension, and the highly controlled violence of the battle.
